

Snow On Way?

Brisk easterly winds are expected to whip the shores of Vancouver Island this evening, bringing a mixture of overcast skies and showers.

While there's no risk of snowshoes becoming the rig of the day in the near future, forecasts call for a possible mixture of snow with tonight's rain, particularly in areas like the Malahat.

But it won't last.

Forecast for Thursday is for more of the same — clouds and rain with low temperatures tonight ranging in the 35 degree mark, rising to the mid-40s Thursday.

Hussein Militant

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan called on Arab states today to mobilize their armies for a showdown with Israel "because force is the only means that can resolve the Middle East conflict."

In a speech from the throne opening the Jordanian parliament, the 36-year-old monarch said that Israel "believes only in force, so force must be our way to peace."

The militant tone of the king's policy speech indicated he is moving closer to the thinking of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who said his country has decided to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict by armed combat rather than peace negotiations.

Heavy security precautions were evident inside and outside the parliament building.

The king's speech came three days after the assassination of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Telli in Cairo.

Hussein insisted on Israel's withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and again promised Palestinian Arabs in the Israeli-occupied West Bank they would have the right to decide their future only after these territories are liberated.

In Washington, Israeli Premier Golda Meir hinted on arrival Tuesday for talks with President Nixon that she might be ready to suggest some new path towards a Middle East peace.

Another possibility, she suggested, was renewal of the United Nations mediation effort by special envoy Gunnar Jarring—overshadowed by the U.S. drive on the canal question for the last nine months.

REFUNDS STUDIED

British Columbia's Liquor Industry is considering a depot system for refunding wine and liquor bottles, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said today.

Kiernan's statement came after he was asked whether B.C. would follow Alberta and require damage deposits on the containers as an anti-litter measure.

The minister said it is "preferable" that industry police itself and B.C.'s litter act requires other amendments before enlarging its scope to include wine and liquor containers.

He said he has not decided whether to bring these containers under the act should industry fail to create the depot system. Kiernan emphasized the liquor industry has not given him a "declared statement of policy" that the depots will be created.

CIVIL WAR in East Pakistan and continuing fighting between India and Pakistan has left millions homeless and starving. Babies and children are the most pitiful victims of this tragic strife and this year the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada is devoting the full resources of its Cup of Milk

Fund to Pakistani refugee relief. The fund campaign opened officially in Victoria Tuesday night when USC executive director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova made a moving appeal for help at a public meeting. An account of the meeting and details on how Victorians can help is on Page 2.

Pakistan Army Admits India Force Winning

From AP-Reuters

The Pakistan army says its soldiers repulsed Indian attacks at two points on the East Pakistan border, inflicting heavy casualties on the Indians.

However, Pakistan radio Tuesday night admitted that Indian troops were making small gains in various areas of East Pakistan but "at great costs."

The radio said India was using tanks and bringing in troops on all fronts.

A Pakistan army spokesman in Dacca said Tuesday night the Pakistani troops repelled an Indian attack at Chaugachia, in the Jessore district on East Pakistan's western frontier, and thwarted an Indian attempt to capture Kamalpur, in the Mymensingh sector on the northwest front.

He said the Indians, having failed to capture Kamalpur, launched a fresh attack supported by tanks and artillery Monday night on two fronts.

The spokesman said the battlefield was covered with Indian dead and that the Indians tried to remove the bodies from East Pakistan territory under a covering artillery bombardment.

It also reported that Pakistani troops captured seven Indian soldiers and a quantity of arms and ammunition in Dinajpur, in East Pakistan's northern sector.

The Indian government says the fighting in East Pakistan is mainly between the Mukti Bahini, the East Pakistan independence fighters, and the West Pakistan army.

New Delhi says Indian troops have crossed into East Pakistan only when attacked by the Pakistanis.

An All-India radio broadcast early today said the Mukti Bahini, in a series of fresh offensives, had liberated three areas in the Sylhet sector in the east and had launched an all-out attack on the strategic town of Feni in the Noakhali district.

The radio added that latest reports also said Faridpur, southwest of Dacca and home town of the jailed Awami League leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, and the southern town of Barisal were completely under the control of the Bahini.

NEWS BRIEFS

Ex-Grit Promoted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Liberal Larry Desjardins, the St. Boniface MIA who has had an in-and-out relationship with Manitoba's New Democratic Party government since it came to office in 1969, was appointed to the provincial cabinet today by Premier Ed Schreyer.

Freight Rolling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railway freight service began returning to normal on the main line today when a full shift of yardmen returned to their jobs. The return-to-work followed a Tuesday meeting at which more than 200 members of the United Transportation Union, Local 1747, were given legal advice to stop their protest against new contract provisions.

CANDIDATES' VIEWS

Over the next few days the Times will carry the views of local candidates in the Dec. 11 municipal elections.

Today on pages 19, 20 and 21 the statements of some of the candidates appear. More will be presented in subsequent editions.

Cabinet Sets Closure On Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — To Liberal cheers, the government today gave formal notice that it will impose closure to cut off debate on the tax change bill.

Privy Council President Allan Rock, government house leader, gave the notice that closure will be invoked under rule 75C, the so-called guillotine rule.

The tax bill has been under Commons debate for 28 days. Closure was last used in 1969 to pass the new Commons rules that included 75C.

PC PROPOSAL REJECTED

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, said the government's use of 75C would set the Commons on an uncharted course studded with "shoals and reefs."

The government should not have "stupidly rejected" the suggestion by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield that the mammoth bill be divided, with early passage assured for those sections with which practically all MPs agreed and the rest of it held in abeyance for later debate.

The House must be wary because use of the 75C rule would set precedents which, in future, would bind the Commons and the country.

On Tuesday, much of the argument centred on a temporary tax case—the Crown versus the late Stafford Smythe and Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens—and how the decision is made regarding court procedure for tax-evasion cases.

The issue was the Crown option of prosecuting either by indictment or by summary conviction.

When the Crown selects indictment, conviction carries a mandatory prison sentence of between two months and five years. Summary conviction leaves the option of either a fine or a jail term to the judge.

Smythe and Ballard, holding the controlling interests in Maple Leaf Gardens, home of Toronto's National Hockey League team, challenged the government right to proceed by indictment after they were charged with tax evasion. The matter went to the Supreme Court of Canada, which upheld the government's right.

The tax-evasion part of the case still is before the courts.

But Conservative MPs argued Tuesday that the Crown option is unfair.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said it left the federal attorney-general with too powerful a tool that was too open to abuse.

"It is not likely to happen but the power is there," Jack Bigg (PC—Regina) said the system destroyed what should be an objective of the law—equal treatment for all.

Corporations convicted of tax evasion pay fines, said Mr. Bigg, a former RCMP officer.

Before stalling on this aspect, the House approved a group of items in the big bill after the government agreed to ease opposition objections by changing some words.

SHARP SET TO HIT AUTO PACT BRAKES

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes External Affairs Minister Sharp as indicating Canada is prepared to suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-United States auto pact.

"It is believed" the suspension might last two years," The Star says.

It quotes Sharp as saying in an interview that Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help the U.S. ease its economic problems so that Washington can abolish its 10-per-cent extra duty on imports.

Sharp "indicated the Canadian contributions would include" suspension of the safeguards, agreement to increase the duty-free allowance on goods bought by Canadian visitors to the U.S. — now $25 every three months — and agreement to purchase more arms from the U.S. under the defence sharing agreement.

Ferry Report Dismays Victims

By BRYAN MCGILL
Times Staff

An elderly Alberta couple who plunged in their car into the ocean from an unloading B.C. Ferry in Nanaimo expressed dismay Tuesday that a B.C. Ferries report attached no blame to the crew, or to mechanical failure.

Mrs. William Martin, 75, of Port Macleod, said she and her husband, who is 82, were driving off the Queen of New Westminster ferry ramp Oct. 20 when the ferry suddenly moved out. "Now whose fault is that, I ask you?"

She added that neither she nor her husband were ever contacted by B.C. Ferries in its investigation of the incident.

FULL REPORT

In a letter to Highways Minister Wesley Black, B.C. Ferries general manager Monty Aldous said no mechanical failure of the ferry's hydraulic system had been found nor anything to indicate human error.

Aldous could not be reached to find out who carried out the investigation or if the full report was going to be made public. However, a highways department spokesman said today that mechanical experts had been called in and witnesses questioned. "They couldn't find out what was the cause."

Herbert Hacking, 53, a highways department patrolman, who with John König, 19, of Vancouver, saved the couple from drowning told the Times he saw the ship pull away and the car slip into the water.

"When a ferry moves nothing will hold it," he said when asked whether the vessel was secured.

Hacking, who was later questioned by B.C. Ferries on the incident, said the car floated for a few seconds before sinking nose downward. He and König then dived in.

B.C. Trade Deputy Reported in Ottawa

Robert Renwick is no longer deputy minister of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce for British Columbia, the Times learned today.

Renwick, 54, left B.C. two weeks ago for Ottawa for an undisclosed job in the federal civil service, a source close to the former deputy minister said.

The source said Renwick was "just let out of his job" at the end of October. Renwick's house at 3542 Redwood is for sale and his phone is out of service.

Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skilling was not available for comment today. His secretary said Skilling was not making an announcement about Renwick's departure or his replacement for some time yet.

A former federal trade official, Renwick left for Ottawa by car and was not expected to have arrived there yet. Directory assistance in Ottawa does not show a new listing for a Robert Renwick.

There have been rumors that Renwick's replacement will come from outside the department, possibly a former pulp mill executive. Renwick became deputy minister in 1967 when Health Minister Ralph Lofmark held Skilling's portfolio. Skilling succeeded Lofmark in the portfolio three years ago.

A TUG IN ANGER

By NEILL GADDES
Times Staff

Joseph D. Latondress felt he had an unwarranted telephone bill to pay for a phone he never used.

Early today he backed a tow truck up to the front doors of the B.C. Telephone building, 1321 Blanshard, connected the tow cable and drove off leaving the doors off.

"I do have a good excuse, I feel," the 20-year-old accused from Quesnel told Judge William Ostler.

room to telephone Paris four times.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, the Europeans said, was confronted with a solid front by the major U.S. trade partners that a realignment was impossible unless it involved a downward change in the dollar's value.

Conference sources said this indicated the talks were at a high and delicate political level, a fact supported by the decision of French Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing to leave the conference

Latondress said two years ago he had requested the phone company to remove a phone from a home he was leaving in Port Alberni.

He said he left that address but several months later received a bill for $300. He said the people who moved into the house continued to use the phone under his name.

Ostler said the incident was the "most blatant, aggressive case of mischief" he had heard for awhile.

The judge gave the man a nominal one day in jail and fined him $400.

U.S. Hints Devaluation Of Own Dollar on Way

ROME (UPI) — The United States today considered devaluation of the once mighty and now seriously beleaguered American dollar as part of a new western monetary system.

Karl Schiller, the West German economic and finance minister, agreed with a questioner that U.S. readiness to discuss concrete figures, including the dollar, represented a breakthrough in monetary negotiations.

The U.S. conceded the possibility of dollar devaluation in negotiations with other members of the so-called Group of Ten, the world's wealthiest non-Communist countries, in return for significant financial and trade advantages.

West European officials said they were "reasonably optimistic" that a basis for monetary realignment was possible with final negotiations early next year.

NEW SYSTEM

"There is every sign that America is now prepared to see a framework for a new system which would include a change in the dollar's value, provided the conditions are right," a European Common Market participant said.

The framework, as discussed by finance ministers, involved devaluation of the U.S. dollar and upward revaluation of western European currencies, such as the franc and the mark, plus the Japanese yen.

"Does this represent a breakthrough?" a reporter shouted as Schiller appeared. "Yes, it could," Schiller replied.

A French spokesman sounded another optimistic note.

Affluence, Drugs Go Hand-in-Hand: Report

TORONTO (CP) — A survey on drug use among high school students in North Bay, Ont., reveals that children from better-off homes are more prone to taking certain drugs.

The survey, conducted by Dianne Fejer of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation, also found that students who don't use alcohol or marijuana tend to have better scholastic records than those who do.

The survey, conducted last May, was released today. All 3,147 students in Grades 9, 11 and 13 in North Bay's six high schools were asked to take part. About 82 per cent, or 2,676 students, answered.

The survey took into account the use of 12 drugs ranging from alcohol, tobacco and marijuana to barbiturates, glue and other solvents.

Alcohol and tobacco were most commonly used with 70.9 per cent of the students having taken alcohol within the previous six months and 47.7 per cent having taken tobacco.

Marijuana was used by 41.2 per cent of the students, LSD by 10.5 per cent, barbiturates by 8.2 per cent; other hallucinogens by 6.5 per cent; tranquilizers by 7.0 per cent; amphetamines by 4.3 per cent; opiates and solvents by 3.3 per cent; and glue by 1.8 per cent.

The survey also found that males tend to use more alcohol, marijuana, tobacco, LSD and other hallucinogens than females. Females use more tranquilizers.

Students who had used alcohol and marijuana in the previous six months, the survey found, more often had fathers who were professionals and managers than students who had not used drugs.

For example, the survey stated, about 27 per cent of alcohol users had professionals or managers for fathers compared with 22.5 per cent of non-users.

Alcohol and marijuana use were closely related, the survey found, stating that almost all marijuana users had taken alcohol in the previous six months.

The survey added it appears that marijuana isn't a substitute for alcohol and that marijuana users are also more often drinkers.

$1,302 Fast Start For 20th USC Fund

The Unitarian Service Committee's Christmas fund-raising drive got off to a good start in Victoria Tuesday with an initial collection of $1,302.

The 20th annual USC drive, which is devoted this year to Pakistani refugee relief, was opened by executive director Dr. Lotia Hichmanova at the St. John Ambulance Auditorium.

Provincial Minister of Agriculture Cyril Sheford attended.

The USC, a non-denominational, non-political organization which is government endorsed and registered as a Canadian charitable organization.

Donations should be mailed to USC c/o P.O. Box 66, Victoria, B.C., or left at any Victoria branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

TOUR ENDS
Dr. Hichmanova arrived in Victoria Friday at the end of her cross-Canada tour, which began Sept. 15 in St. John's, Nfld.

She has christened the local campaign the Cup of Milk fund, and the goal is $15,000.

One dollar provides 50 cups of milk for needy children, one loin-cloth dhoti, or one Indian sari, she said.

Pakistani refugees are currently entering India at the rate of 40 to 50 thousand per day. Many are naked, need medical attention and suffer severe malnutrition, Dr. Hichmanova points out.

The refugees lack of appropriate clothing, where temperatures average 40-50 degrees, has prompted the USC "stitch-a-shirt" project.

Shirts can be made in an hour, using any material except wool, from simple USC patterns.

Dr. Hichmanova also requests donations of cardigans and pullovers of all sizes; blankets, quilts and afghans; men's shirts, towels, clothing for children two to six years old, saris and bags of soap.

These may be left at Admiral's Delivery Service, 2612 Turner St.

THREE NEEDS
"Food, work, and peace" are the three needs of underprivileged people, Dr. Hichmanova said.

USC attempts to fill these needs using local staff in various projects throughout Asia. Some of these projects are:

• USC sponsors the only polio clinic in Vietnam, which has the highest incidence of polio in the world.

• In Africa, USC underwrites 10 per cent of the cost of lunch meals in schools. A bowl of soup and maize costs one-and-a-half cents per child per day, but many cannot afford this.

• In Korea, USC operates a hospital for disabled children.

The safeguards attached to the 1965 agreement at Canada's insistence were designed to influence the pattern of Canadian automotive production and protect Canadian parts manufacturers.

The U.S. has argued that these safeguards were for a transitional period only and now should be removed because auto trade between the two countries has swung from a deficit to a surplus in Canada's favor.

WON'T BARGAIN

The Star says Mr. Sharp stressed that Canadian moves "would not be made in an attempt to bargain any special exemption from the surcharge."

"He said any moves by Canada... would be aimed broadly at the prevention of a disastrous worldwide trade war threatened by U.S. protectionist policies."

In Washington, a U.S. source close to the auto pact negotiations said any idea of a suspension of the safeguards "doesn't make much sense."

"If we are just going to suspend the safeguards, with the threat that they could be reimposed in two years or so, that isn't full reciprocity," he added.

Sewer Gas Seen As Death Cause

Accumulated sewer gas causing asphyxiation is suspected in the deaths Friday of two Port Alberni city workers in an underground water main chamber.

Works department meter inspectors William A. Moore, 63, of 708 10th Ave. South, and George A. Hoare, 37, of 1109 Haslam St., were found dead about 1 p.m.

The men were discovered by city forklift operator David Anderson, who noticed the manhole cover off and climbed down to investigate. The fire department was called, but was unable to revive the men with resuscitating equipment.

An autopsy was scheduled for today to determine cause of death, and if possible the type and source of the lethal gas. Port Alberni RCMP are investigating the circumstances of the accident.

BEFORE NOON
The victims went down the manhole between 11 a.m. and noon to check meters on a water main. A city spokesman said any gases present in the chamber when the men went down may have dissipated through the open manhole by the time they were discovered.

Among possible gases present was listed methane from sewer fluid or other gases from mill waste effluent.

A Workmen's Compensation Board official said the board would be "really interested" in results of the investigation, "because there is going to be a lot of hardship and money involved."

GAS DETECTOR
He noted that there is a board regulation which stipulates that a gas detector must be lowered into any underground work area before workers go down themselves.

Use of automatic exhaust pumps is not mandatory, but they usually are set up when men are doing work which produces gas emissions of its own.

No gas was detected in the chamber when the men were carried out, possibly because the manhole cover had been off more than an hour, said Fire Chief Maurice Smith. An RCMP check also failed to find gas traces.

Moore had been with the city works department 37 years; Hoare for 10 years.

An Acre of Park Enough—Savage

One acre of new parkland for James Bay residents will bring the district's park requirements up to scratch, according to a report by Ald. Clyde Savage.

Savage's report, introduced to council's B. Committee Tuesday, was written in response to a brief written by the Beacon Hill Park Association.

In the report, which members of council promised to study but gave no commitment in, Savage said the city plans to reserve one acre of vacant land adjacent to Fisherman's Wharf "for beautification and a public rest area."

The Beacon Hill Association said it wanted the creation of a much larger green belt in the James Bay area because of anticipated population growth.

The association said "this will be vital to offset the untenable land pressure that will be made by the full implementation of the present plan for encouraging high-density building in the James Bay area."

Savage's reply read: "It is the feeling of the parks department that with the waterfront areas of Holland Point Park, Beacon Hill Park, Macdonald Park and the proposed acre at Fisherman's Wharf area, sufficient parkland will be available to James Bay residents."

The association urged the city to "again review the recommendations of the James Bay Land Use and Transportation Plan in view of greatly increasing the available parkland in this most critical area of urban development."

"Would the city be willing to try to enter into an arrangement with the Capital Region District Board, the provincial government and the federal government to co-operatively create a major recreational area and green belt, or almost continuous park area from Belleville Street to Dallas Road?"

Memorial Service
A memorial service was held in Oak Bay United Church today for James Norman Ogden, 18, of 1392 St. David, who was killed in a recent car accident in Afghanistan.

His father, Kenneth Larson, said Tuesday the youth was travelling through the country with a friend when the accident occurred.

Larson said he was still waiting for details of the mishap.

The youth, who was about to enter grade 11 at Oak Bay senior high school, is survived by his parents, who live at 1392 St. David; brothers Barton and Blair; and sisters, Dale and Larrie.

the weather
December announced its arrival with a stormy night on B.C.'s north coast where light houses reported winds of 60 to 65 miles per hour for much of the night. In other parts of the province however the weather was not unusual. Skies were generally cloudy, and temperatures mild. An active Pacific storm lies several hundred miles off the Oregon coast. It is moving northeastward and will bring rain and southeast gales to southwestern B.C. today then moving inland to give snow to the interior tonight. In its wake very cool Pacific air will move to the coast maintaining cloudy showery weather. Snow will be mixed in with the rain showers along the outer coast with the threat of showers of mixed rain and snow also spreading to Victoria and the lower mainland tonight.

Partygoing Liz Will Pack Jewels

PARIS—Elizabeth Taylor will wear $3 million worth of diamonds when she goes to a party Thursday night. Alog with Miss Taylor and the diamonds will go a heavy police escort to surround the Chateau de Ferriere estate where Baron Guy de Rothschild is giving the party.

Focal point of Miss Taylor's ensemble will be the $1 million diamond Richard Burton bought for her last year. Other guests at the party will include the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

JERUSALEM — Johnny Cash is making a 90-minute feature film at Christmas holy sites in Israel and occupied Jordan. "I've never seen a movie about Jesus that I really liked," says the singer. "So I thought I'd make one myself."

MONTREAL — The doctrine of "glomology" could involve Canadians that they might lose sight of the country's real opportunities for growth, Alastair Gillespie, minister of state for science, said Tuesday. "We need to remind ourselves that no country on earth, no other nation, has the opportunities that we, as a country, have."

TURIN, Italy — A 15-year-old girl factory worker died today in what police said was a cyanide pill kiss of death with her married lover. Antonio Andreucci, 27, a foreigner in the factory, was charged with murder. He was in serious condition in hospital from cyanide poisoning. Police quoted him as saying he put the cyanide pill in his mouth and passed it to the girl, Maria Tummoio, in a double suicide kiss because "ours was a love without a future."

WASHINGTON — A woman teacher has filed a $100,000 suit against a sex-education group, charging their course made her feel. The 28-year-old physical education teacher, who was not named, said in papers filed with the United States district court here that she was ordered by her private school to attend the course, given by the American Association of Sex Education Counsellors at a Washington hotel.

The group paired off, with the men's backs to the women, who were directed to put parts of the body of the men, she charged. She said she was shocked, humiliated and left, but later became emotionally upset, had to leave her school and finally sought the care of a psychiatrist.

Because of this she has now become totally frigid, she said in her suit.

VANCOUVER — Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm of the British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday dismissed an application by Reverley Cowlishaw which would have forced the director of the provincial rehabilitation department to grant increases in her welfare payments recommended by a review board. The judge directed that the matter be referred to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson for an interpretation of the British Columbia Social Assistance Act.

A welfare board of review recommended that Mrs. Cowlishaw's payments, on which she supports herself and six daughters, be increased by $150.50 a month, to $493.50, to enable the family to lead "a reasonably normal and healthy existence."

OTTAWA — University of Manitoba Professor Wayne Neilson, who once wrote an article called Justification for Revolution, says he no longer endorses violence as a means to social change. Neilson told 46 Carleton University students at a lecture meeting Monday that if Lenin had known the Russian Revolution would lead to the purges of the mid '20s and '30s, he would have been against it. "Not every type of socialist society is an improvement over the one you overthrow."

The leader of Canada's housing and development industry said in Victoria this week the industry can exceed the Economic Council's target on new housing by a small margin.

By 1973 Canadian builders can produce 1,135 million starts compared with the one million goal of the council, predicts Harold Shipp, president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

He spoke to members of the Victoria Home Builders Association at the Imperial Inn Monday, accompanied by HUDAC executive vice-president B. J. Bernard, of Toronto.

Starts in the current year are likely to total 235,000 because of impetus given to building by the private sector and government policy. That would be a 28.4 per cent gain over 1970 and 11 per cent over record 1969.

The industry is capable of starting 240,000 units a year, Shipp said, reaching 260,000 by 1973.

The Port Credit builder, who also is president of Applewood Motors Ltd. in Streetsville, Ont., and is involved in Florida real estate development, insisted that the balance of industry-government roles in production of housing makes the product in Canada the "most efficient in the world."

In other countries, where housing is in inadequate supply, the systems are, at fault and they cannot compete with Canada's successful system when they are introduced to this country, Shipp said.

The builder conceded the supply of housing for low and moderate income people is still inadequate, but if the government continues to make incentive funds available, the private sector will continue to make housing cheaper than could be produced any other way.

Washington who would not say that Canada must share the burden of solving the U.S. balance-of-payments problems which brought on the surcharge and other measures.

Canada 'Not Anti-American'

NEW YORK (CP) — A group of Canadians assured some troubled American businessmen Tuesday that the Canadian people and government are not anti-American although they are angry over such things as the Archika nuclear blast and U.S. economic policies.

The assurances were given by Ivan Head, special assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, and others at a conference on Canadian-American relations held by the Centre for International Studies at New York University.

"Canadian friendship can be taken for granted," said

Head at the meeting of about 40 representatives from business, government and labor from both sides of the border.

Head made his statement after some Americans expressed concern after hearing some hours of round-table discussion that largely rested on the U.S. economic policies and foreign investment in Canada.

Head, in a forthright statement, said the U.S. government idea of normalcy is a return to trade surpluses with Canada in a deficit position. He said there is "all hell to pay" when Canadian trade is in surplus for three years after being in a deficit to the United States since the beginning of the century.

The U.S. government was represented by Edward Allen, deputy assistant secretary for international economic research analysis, of the department of commerce, and Deane Hinton, senior staff member of the White House council on economic policy.

Allen said the 10-per-cent special duty on imports — the surcharge that Canada objects to so forcibly — will be removed soon. But when pressed he could not say when.

ANTI-SUBMARINE COMPETITION

Commonwealth armed forces' aircrews from Canada, New Zealand, England and Australia, including four crews from Comox, will compete in an anti-submarine competition at CFB Comox today until Dec. 8.

This will be the first time that the competition has been held on a common ground — formerly results were posted at various bases and competitors never met.

The crews will be competing for the Fincastle trophy, presented in 1960 by the parents of a British airman who lost his life as an air gunner in Coastal Command.

This weekend's competitors will be using Esquimalt-based submarine HMCS Rainbow, skippered by Lt.-Cmdr. Ray Hunt, as their target.

The Royal Air Force will be flying Nimrods, the Royal Australian Air Force entries, two P3B Orions, as will the Royal New Zealand Air Force.

Canadian crews from Comox and Summerside, P.E.I., will use the Argus.

Last year the trophy was won by the RAF, with Canada placing second.

This year's winner will receive the trophy from Air Marshal Sir Bert Craven, air officer commanding 18 Maritime Group, RAF.

Cambodians Said To Be on Retreat

SAIGON (AP) — Cambodian forces were reported in retreat today under an onslaught of North Vietnamese attacks on the northeastern front.

Official reports reaching Saigon said the Cambodians had pulled out of the town of Baray, six miles northeast of Phnom Penh, and were retreating from Kompong Thom, six miles further north.

The Cambodian government called for more air support from its U.S.- and South Vietnamese allies to save 20,000 Cambodian troops isolated in pockets along more than 30 miles of Highway 6.

The South Vietnamese incursion into eastern Cambodia was intended to force the North Vietnamese to retreat from the northeastern front, but there was no indication this was occurring.

Meanwhile, 37,000 South Vietnamese troops backed by heavy U.S. air support pushed ahead with dry-season offensives, but met only light resistance.

One of the drives, into eastern Cambodia, had one objective of relieving pressure on Cambodian forces along Highway 6. The 25,000-man South Vietnamese force in this drive is on the eastern side of the Mekong River, the Cambodians on the western side.

Inquiry Planned

GOLD RIVER — An inquiry will be held into the drowning death of a 20-year-old sergeant killed Saturday when his car plunged into a creek in the Nimpkish Valley near here.

Gold River RCMP identified the victim James D. Kennedy, of CFB Comox, the driver of the car.

Two passengers, John Norman Smith, 23, of Courtenay and Paul Gregory Dorian, 22, of CFB Comox, escaped with minor injuries, RCMP said.

The vehicle went off the Canadian Forest Products logging road about six miles north of Vernon logging camp, landing in the Quilla Creek.

RCMP said the three men were driving to Holberg near Port Hardy at the north end of the island to visit friends. The logging road is open to the public on weekends.

A Time for Frankness

With civic election nominations closed as of Monday, Greater Victoria municipalities find themselves with a number of returns by acclamation — particularly in Esquimalt where lack of contestants sent the mayor and three aldermen back to office without competition — and a congestion of old and new entrants in some other instances. In Victoria, with four seeking the mayor's chair, there are eleven candidates for four aldermanic posts, only two of whom are incumbents. Saanich is in almost the same position, with ten aspirants for four council seats. Central Saanich has eight candidates for three seats.

Such situations should make for spirited campaigns, but to date there has been little spirit and less excitement. Some of the candidates are completely new to the local governmental scene and should be making the public fully acquainted with their qualifications for office. Several have tried unsuccessfully on previous occasions and may enter the lists this time with improved chances.

Victoria, in particular, should be embroiled in a hot election fight, but there is a curious detachment in the efforts of most candidates. The mayoral contest has brought out periodic statements from the contestants, but these lack the zest which face-to-face debate would produce. There are vital issues at stake. Voters should demand a clear statement from each man on what his intentions are in regard to city planning, high-rises, harbor development, parks and other matters in which the public is deeply interested. When do we get down to the detailed nitty-gritty?

The same query may be applied to aldermanic candidates, who should make their policies clear beyond any doubts. The more persons running in any election race the more important it is for each one to take a firm stand on every question. Each should be confident enough in his own judgments to welcome having them publicized in black and white before he is elected. Candidates who shy away from such specifics cannot be expected to show any greater ability to face up to decisions when in office.

Congratulations are in order for all who have received acclamation, especially Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay, Mayor Arthur Young of Esquimalt and Mayor Stanley Dear of Sidney. There is a gratifying element of flattery in a situation where one's record is such that no one dares to challenge it.

The Greater Victoria municipalities in general have reached an important point in their evolution. The impact of crucial problems, the rise of regional authority, the growth of the population, the evidence of vast future changes in our ways of living—these make public office today a very serious responsibility for elected persons; they make elections a very serious responsibility for the voters.

Greater Use

Once described as a "political infirmity" the often maligned Canadian Senate has lately become the source of a number of special reports on important matters written by men of high calibre and expertise. At a fraction of the cost of royal commissions and task forces the Senate has produced valuable papers on poverty, growth, employment and price stability and science policy.

Sen. Everett's Committee on National Finance recently published a report on ways and means of stabilizing the economy which the government is said to be studying carefully. The final report of the science policy committee is awaited in this vital area of national concern.

Although the Senate is still a preferred place to reward the politically faithful, its usefulness to the public is becoming more evident.

Getting Together at Last?

According to The Observer, of London, China's Premier Chou En-lai has proposed to the U.S. presidential adviser, Mr. Henry Kissinger, that a new international conference on Indochina be held in Peking. The suggestion was made last month when Mr. Kissinger was working out an agenda and technical matters with the Chinese for Mr. Nixon's forthcoming visit. The report indicates that the backing of China for a settlement in Vietnam will be necessary before there can be an understanding between Peking and Washington.

With a Russian-sponsored European security conference on the horizon, a conference on the thorny problem of Indochina could round out the diplomatic timetable very nicely. The Chinese, like the Russians, may wish to secure their common frontiers by such a widely encompassing meeting. A Peking conference would be the counterpart of a security meeting in Europe — although an Asian conference might be more appropriately held in a neutralist capital like Rangoon.

Laotian neutrality, an uncertain expression of Sino-American diplomatic accord, stands nonetheless as a precedent for Indochina. Besides, times have changed since the conference on Laos in the

DAVID HUMPHREYS

But No Clock or Calendar

LONDON — So great is its suspicion and hatred of everything British, the Conservative government does and so well developed are its own instincts to oppose, that nothing approaching objectivity could be expected from the Labor Party over the Rhodesian settlement. It is unlikely that Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home did anything in Salisbury to deserve the noisy, invective-filled reception with which he was welcomed back to the Commons by the opposition.

In the Rhodesia settlement, Labor members have to contend, not merely with their abhorrence of all Tory works but all Ian Smith works as well. There is a feeling, not only among the Laborites, that Ian Smith is simply not as good as his word, that he cannot be trusted, that no commitment given by him is worth the paper it is written on. We shall see.

Only the other night, the BBC played an interview with Mr. Smith in which he said the five principles which the last three British governments have adhered to meant nothing to him. They were British not Rhodesian principles, he said. As well, it is understood, Mr. Smith has been forced into a deal by stark economic facts. He has run dangerously short of foreign exchange. This alone, not principle, has brought him into agreement. He admitted as much in his own announcement in Salisbury.

Whatever his motives, Mr. Smith has accepted the principles and the first step has been taken with Sir Alec toward ending the illegal independence he declared on Nov. 11, 1965.

that they are acceptable to the people of Rhodesia as a whole. Sir Alec rejected a suggestion from Labor critic Denis Healey that the commission should include "respected Commonwealth figures such as Mr. Lester Pearson of Canada."

Liberal Leader Jeremy Thorpe said that only by appointing respected members for the white and black Com-will achieve equal representation with the whites in Parliament. Two African voting rolls will be established, with membership depending on income, property and education. As registrations on the higher roll pass given percentages, African seats will be added by direct election. Meanwhile, other seats will be added through indirect elections based on the lower voting roll; requiring lower qualifications.

After equal representation is reached, there are provisions for consulting all Rhodesians again by commission and for creating 10 additional seats to be filled by merged white and higher African electoral rolls.

Thus is fulfilled the first principle of unimpeded progress to majority rule. Again there are qualms about Salisbury's intentions. The provisions are undeniably detailed and complicated and they appear to be generous.

Indefinite Timetable

Under fierce questioning, Sir Alec said the timetable could not be established by clock and calendar. It would depend on many factors including economic, political and social development of the African community. Britain would grant in development aid $125 millions over the next decade, with additional unspecified sums pledged by the Rhodesian government. The British grants will be made annually, retaining for London some economic bargaining power for the first 10 years of what could be a 30-year process.

Perhaps Sir Alec's most telling reference was his appeal for the settlement to be viewed "considering history and the realities of power." In other words, what is the alternative?

Sir Alec emphasized it would be an irrevocable slide into an apartheid system. The African would be incomparably better off in the new Rhodesia. To Africans that might be a choice of the lesser of two evils for an interim period.

But for the first time they are able to look forward to the realities of power for themselves, power without bloodshed. Britain has set the stage for a historic experiment in the transfer of power in Africa. It is a vision of a multi-racial system now unknown on the continent. Patience and trust will be needed to bring it to fruition.

monwealth could the commission establish worldwide credibility? Sir Alec said the settlement was a British responsibility, so laid down by the United Nations, and "we must carry it out ourselves."

There is also an assuring reference for another commission to review all aspects of racial discrimination in Rhodesia, including existing legislation. It will have a special brief to examine the discriminatory Land Tenure Act.

But that is to be a Rhodesian commission. The Rhodesian government's credibility is questioned when it gives its "firm intention, within the spirit of these proposals to make progress towards ending racial discrimination." Similarly any progress will ultimately depend on the will of whites in Salisbury.

The proposals establish a complicated formula by which the Africans some day Acceptable?

It remains to be seen whether the settlement principles are incorporated into will be acceptable to the country's black and white communities and, indeed, whether Mr. Smith is sufficiently in control of Rhodesian politics to see the settlement through.

About an equal number of criticisms and assurances were raised Tuesday after the settlement details were published here and in Salisbury, as Sir Alec and Mr. Smith made statements to their parliaments.

On the favorable side, Britain will establish a commission to ascertain whether the proposals are acceptable to all the people. They are "conditional on the British government being satisfied

Guns or Poverty—or Both

WASHINGTON — Two strong opinions about America are now widely held and fiercely defended in the capital. The first is that the major threat to the security of the nation still lies in the rising military, and particularly the naval, power of the Soviet Union. And the second is that the major threat lies in the internal divisions of the nation and in the social, political and economic derangement of an overpopulated world.

On the proposition that both these threats exist and must be dealt with simultaneously, there is a wide area of agreement, but on the hard practical questions of priorities and purposes, how much money for carriers and how much for poverty, there is wide and deep disagreement.

This is a fundamental and philosophical conflict that divides sincere and thoughtful men and women, some of whom cannot resolve the matter in their own minds. For example, a distinguished member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, deeply worried that Soviet missile and naval power is now tipping the balance of power against the United States, nevertheless observed privately the other day that he was less concerned about the nation's ability to maintain an effective balance of power in the world than he was about its ability to maintain a balance of confidence and trust at home.

Will and Unity

In short, no matter how anxious he was about the expansion of Soviet power into the Mediterranean and the oceans of the world, he was even more anxious about our ability as a people to hold together and find the unity and will to use what power we have in anything except a direct attack upon the territory and other obvious vital interests of the United States.

What President Nixon has done in the face of this terrible dilemma is what most politicians would do. He has compromised with it. He has cut back the military budget a bit and cut back the nation's commitments in Vietnam and elsewhere in the underdeveloped world, and at the same time he has increased the budget for health, education and welfare at home.

But the defence appropriations bill passed by the House the other day still provided $71 billions in new funds for the Pentagon — not enough to meet the requests of the President, let alone the Joint Chiefs of Staff, but still large enough to limit what was left over to deal with the dangerous human problems at home and abroad.

In fundamental arguments like this the advantage is almost always with the side that favors dealing with the immediate and the tangible problem. The new Soviet missiles and naval vessels are a fact, not a theory. The movement of Soviet power in the Mediterranean and terrible dilemma ...

Soviet influence in India are facts. There is a shift in the world balance of power, and the trend is not favorable to the United States.

Still, important as this is, the U.S. retains equality or superiority in most military fields, while the threat from non-military trends at home and in the world seem to me, at least, to be more alarming than the threat of Moscow's growing fleets of ships and missiles.

There is now in the world not only a confrontation of military power but a confrontation of societies, and the state of our society at the moment, or so it seems here, is more disturbing than the state of our military defenses.

Few people on either side of the debate here would deny that we are a divided people with an unbalanced economy, and what is more important an unbalanced view of ourselves and how we should be reacting to one another, to our allies, our adversaries and the hungry majority of the human race.

On the philosophical ground, we need not fear the power of the Communist idea, for as Archibald MacLeish observed in last week's Saturday Review, it has turned into the Stalinist reality — the ultimate negation of belief in man, "police state at home and imperial legions abroad."

Still, the American purpose in the world is very plain and confused these days, even in our own minds, and maybe a restatement or affirmation of that purpose is the first order of business, even in military terms.

For the danger in the Soviet military program is not primarily that they may use their missiles and submarines on us but that they may use their new sea-borne missiles as instruments of political influence from the Mediterranean to the Sea of Japan. And without more unity and sense of purpose than we now have after Vietnam, it is hard to imagine any president in the next few years, no matter how many weapons at his command, risking even rational foreign adventures with a divided electorate at his back.

Principle of Union

MacLeish reminds us that Mr. Lincoln, speaking at Independence Hall in Philadelphia on his way to take the oath of the presidency, wondered what great principle or idea it was that had created the Union in the first place and held it together for so long.

It was not, Lincoln felt, "the mere flatter of separation from the Motherland." It was something else, he thought, something more, "something in the Declaration, giving liberty not alone to the people of this country but hope to the world ... something which gave promise that in due time the weights should be lifted from the shoulders of mankind."

This was the American Exposition, as Lincoln saw it: that the survival of the Republic and the Union depended not on chauvinism or military power, but on the power of that revolutionary commitment to the liberty of mankind.

Well, nothing seems more alien to the present mood of the nation than this particular proposition. Yet even in these days of rising isolation and protectionism, the old American affirmation is at least worth remembering. For if there is a clear and present danger in the internal and external disorder of the contemporary world, it may be better to go back to first principles while we are ordering up more guns.

Clean Air for Hospitals

For the past eleven months I have been a patient at the Veterans Hospital on account of gas during World War 1914-1918. I got it at Ypres. And although not too bad then, this is a recurrence on account of lung damage and old age.

There has been much in your and other newspapers about tin cans and bottles and other debris on the highway which can be, and is, picked up and disposed of properly, but nothing is said or done about tobacco smoke.

In this and other hospitals, the visitors come in, and the very first thing they do is light up and blow what they cannot consume or otherwise dispose of into the air for us inmates to breathe. It is time for Mr. Lofmark to do something about it because one cannot pick it up. One is not allowed to smoke in a theatre or public bus, but why a hospital of all places? — E. H. Groom, Veterans Hospital, Victoria.

Forgetting Favors?

Those Canadians who complain so bitterly about Uncle Sam's 10 per cent surcharge on imports seem to forget that, in 1964, our government imposed a similar tax on goods entering this country (soon after which we benefited greatly from a U.S.-Canada auto pact), that last year Uncle Sam had a $1.7 billion deficit trade with Canada, the largest of any nation; that, as Treasury Secretary John Connally stated recently: "The U.S. allows Americans travelling in Canada to spend up to $100 duty free. Canada allows Canadians to spend only $25 across the border before paying duty." No wonder Canadians have such a high standard of living!

Under these circumstances, surely we cannot hope to be exempted from the U.S. surcharge on imports, while other nations are not. Nor have we shown the Americans any gratitude for past favors. Instead, a spate of angry words, often spiced with the familiar "Yankoghome" slogan, is being hurled at them continually. Why?—Fourth Generation Canadian.

A Book for Politicians

There has been much criticism about Ron Wexley's book "The Wonderful World of W.A.C. Bennett."

Personally, I found the book very interesting, and easy to read because of its human, straight-from-the-heart approach to tell the Bennett story in a like-it-was, and like-it-is fashion.

I was impressed, enthused and inspired by it. It's a great book for readers of all ages — especially for aspiring would-be politicians. — Agnes Kripps, M.L.A., Vancouver South.

School Funds Cut Back

The Greater Victoria school district's allowable spending for school construction has been cut back by almost $500,000 by the provincial department of education.

The reduction in allowed spending from $1,740,000 to $1,256,000 was discussed by the board at a special meeting Tuesday night.

It was decided by trustees to reluctantly ratify the amount allowed by the department and to send the department a letter expressing "dissatisfaction" with the amount approved and requesting further discussions on the matter.

Most trustees expressed anger and frustration over the department's action but finally decided to accept the amount.

OR ELSE...

"If we don't accept it, they'll probably cut it down even further," one trustee said.

The amount approved is for new building sites, buildings and equipment. Two large projects which will be cancelled are renovations and additions to Oak Bay junior and senior secondary schools.

Some trustees objected to what they considered one-sided handling of the situation by the department.

"It seems strange that every year they can do this to us," trustee Dr. Carron Jameson said. "Perhaps the thing to do would be to thank them graciously for their magnanimity in donating such vast amounts of money to their humble servants."

Trustee Peter Bunn called the department's action "a pretty sloppy way of running a school construction program."

"Our administration does its very best to plan for the future and then we get this edict from on high that destroys all the plans," he said. "It's a waste of time and effort and skilled help."

WHAT IF...

Dr. Philip Ney asked what would happen if the amount approved by the department was sent back without the board's approval.

He was told that the department occasionally uses a tactic whereby school districts get no funds at all for school construction. "It's known as a freeze," said school board chairman Allan McKinnon. McKinnon said that if the board did not approve the amount allocated by the department, construction, even if it is on a restricted basis, cannot go ahead at all.

Ney said there must be a "critical point below which doing an unsatisfactory job is worse than doing no job at all."

"We're being forced into doing a bad job and we should let the public know," Ney said.

Another cut the district has had to make is in the amount allocated to move around portable classrooms. It was pointed out that the department's action will lead to a curtailment and delay of construction and that an even greater emphasis will have to be put on the use of the portables.

Teachers' Salaries Not News

The next step in the issue of publishing teachers' salaries is up to the minister of education, the Greater Victoria school board was advised Tuesday night.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon said the board will take no further action until Education Minister Donald Broderick asks specifically for a list of teachers in the district with their salaries calculated to include a 6.5 per cent increase in basic pay and increments.

Broderick has hinted that such a list would be published, as were doctors' salaries, earlier this year.

Broderick sent a letter to McKinnon earlier this month, asking that the list be compiled, but did not specify where the list was to be sent.

McKinnon said the board would hold its decision on the sending of the list until the specific request came from Broderick.

District superintendent A. J. Longmore said the list is within a day or two of completion and that no correspondence had been received from the department of education on the matter.

Registrar of Car Salesmen Not in Contest for Popularity

TORONTO (CP) — Some of the more printable names for Reginald MacCormac, registrar of used-car dealers and salesmen in Ontario, include dictator, czar and bureaucrat.

But the 57-year-old former car dealer from the Ottawa Valley, who has helped clean up the used-car business in the province, is not worried about the names he is called.

"I suppose there are those who have little love for me," he said in an interview.

"Most dealers can and do live with the act, but the fact there is such a person as a registrar with power to regulate their business doesn't sit well with them. But I'm not interested in popularity, a fleeting thing at best. As far as I'm concerned, an ounce of respect is worth a ton of popularity."

When the province's Used Car Dealers Act eventually becomes the Motor Vehicle Dealers Act, all car dealers will be under Mr. MacCormac's supervision.

Since Mr. MacCormac became registrar seven years ago, he has seen the virtual disappearance of the car kypsey who moved from one temporary location to another unloading old wrecks on the public.

The registrar said he feels there has been steady improvement in the relationship between dealer and buyer, with most dealerships sticking to a code of ethics.

The sub-marginal operators with no stake in a community were dwindling and their places were being taken by responsible businessmen with a heavy investment in physical plant.

The minority who cut corners, indulge in false, misleading or deceptive advertising, find that Mr. MacCormac is a tough bureaucrat with ample disciplinary powers.

While regional directors administer the act, Mr. MacCormac depends mainly on the public to send him complaints. Between January of 1970 and last July his office received 9,989 telephoned complaints from used-car buyers and these boiled down to 1,066 written complaints on which his agency could act.

People like to have some place where they can telephone and pour out their troubles, regardless of whether their complaints are matters that come within our jurisdiction," he said.

"About 25 per cent have to do with the certificate of mechanical fitness and the rest concern such matters as warranty guarantees and money-back undertakings."

When a buyer makes a written complaint, a copy is sent to the dealer with a request for his version of the affair. When the dealer answers — and they always do — it is up to the registrar to decide whether an investigation is warranted.

"Most dealers are good about fixing a defective car," Mr. MacCormac said.

"A few hard-nosed dealers don't move. We have no power to order restitution and the last thing we want to do is use the threat of cancellation of the dealership's registration. We never tell a dealer what he has to do. It's up to him."

But the dealers who become involved with Mr. MacCormac invariably get the message. They find the best way to avoid unpleasantness is to look after the complainant and send him away happy.

Thank you for helping us get rolling into a new era of customer service.

Two years ago, we commenced calling ourselves the helpful bank, as a way of summing up what we have always tried to be. More recently, we have added another phrase, which we mean just as sincerely: "We'll help you get where you want to go".

Every one of our employees is involved. And they all have one prime objective: to learn a little more about what our customers need or want, and to help them get it—in any practicable way.

We stress this, particularly in the context of our annual financial statements, because we know that two of our most important assets never appear on the balance sheet: the skill and the helpfulness of our men and women everywhere; and the long term goodwill they can build for us by helping you get where you want to go.

Top IOS Officials Arrested in Geneva

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Two American officers of Investors Overseas Services were arrested Tuesday after a hearing on a complaint filed against them by a former customer of a subsidiary of the mutual fund firm.

Robert L. Vesco, chairman of IOS, and the firm's president, Milton Meissner, were taken to the St. Antoine city jail.

Informants said they were arrested after David Tucker, a former client of the Overseas Development Bank, an IOS subsidiary, charged that they engaged in dishonest business practices.

Vesco, 35, head of International Controls Corp. of New Jersey, which took over IOS early this year, was reported to have been taken to the court hearing hours after arriving from New York. A bail hearing was set for today.

IOS fell into financial trouble last year with the drop in Western stock markets. Bernard Cornfeld, who founded IOS 15 years ago, sold his stock in the international mutual fund and quit the company.

Tucker's complaint was understood to be related to allegations made in a Geneva court last July by three Swiss directors of the overseas bank.

SAY SHARES REMOVED

The directors claimed that Vesco arranged to have IOS preferred shares, deposited in the bank as collateral for loans, removed from the bank and voted at the IOS annual meeting this year in Toronto.

Tucker was one of a group of dissident stockholders who unsuccessfully tried to oust Vesco's slate of directors at the meeting.

The directors, who have since left the bank, contended that the removal was done during their three-day absence shortly before the June 30 meeting.

At the time an IOS spokesman denied the accusations, saying the preferred stock in question remained at the bank listed in favor of the dissidents.

Consultant

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Van Luven, former president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Tuesday he plans to open a financial consultant's office.

He said he will concentrate on raising capital for companies and doing work on financial restructuring.

Greater Than Slope

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Interior Department is preparing an environmental impact report on the Gulf of Alaska — an area, an aide to Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) has said, may have greater potential oil reserves than the North Slope.

Martin Lobel, Proxmire's oil expert, came under heavy fire earlier this month from industry sources, who said there was no evidence for his optimism.

An interior spokesman called the region "a promising frontier" for oil and mineral reserves but said more information would be needed before he could give any indication of the extent of the potential resources.

Permits have been issued by the U.S. geological survey for core, for shallow, drilling and seismic surveys. Interior's impact statement should provide estimates of the area's potential as well as data on what exploration might do to the environment.

LEASE SALES

The information is being gathered prior to oil lease sales.

Impact statements also are being prepared for other continental shelf areas, including the Gulf of Mexico and parts of the eastern seaboard. The latter includes areas off Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

"This is part of our routine work of trying to assess potential reserves," an interior spokesman said. "We want to get all the data available to see if the areas are favorable in terms of oil and other resources."

'Blue Book' Gives Answer

EDMONTON (CP) — A local consulting engineering firm says it has developed a mathematical system that will enable owners of small business to become their own management consultants.

All they need is the mathematical "blue book" developed by the engineering firm and a desk calculator, says L. Szabo, Hungarian-born president of Gamma Engineering Ltd.

He says the newly-developed techniques can be applied to any business venture, big or small, to provide accurate information on the effect of internal management decisions and external developments, both financial and technological.

The company has been working since 1963 on the development of such a system for the computer.

He describes the development as a "computerized, corporate financial model" or a generalized mathematical description of how the financial, economic and operation activities of any organization interconnect.

CAN MAKE PROJECTION

"The model is capable of reproducing the actual past forecasting like present fiscal year or projecting the expected next five or 10 years, financial and other operational indicators, such as operating revenues and expenses, depreciation expenses and revenues, return on equity, equity capitalization ratios, taxes, profits or losses, earnings per share, etc."

Szabo, who holds degrees in electrical and mechanical engineering and took post-graduate work in mathematics, says his firm has invented nothing new, so far as basic economic information is concerned.

What is new, he says, are the interconnections that allow a firm to see what they can demand of their operations and predict what effect one requirement will generate in others.

For example, a firm may want a certain equity-capital ratio maintained during the year as well as a certain rate of return and a certain amount of expansion.

"The question is, can I demand all these things simultaneously and if I have to let go, which ones?"

MADE 200 FORMULAS

Szabo says that in developing the system, the firm broke down all the significant operations of an organization into 200 mathematical formulas.

Using 200 variables, however, about 250 million possible combinations can be generated.

The firm bogged down in its research during 1965 and 1966 over how to handle such a vast number of variables and the project was almost abandoned.

But it came up with the idea of "ranking" by the use of certain key or "trigger" equations. Using this approach it was able to work down to about 15 "bundles" of equations. Once the trigger equations were known, the results of other equations in the bundle could be established.

"We relocated top brains to Edmonton by the dozens," he said, adding with a grin that the long, cold winters and clear climate are particularly conducive to long, hard hours of work.

CDC Move Welcomed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Local businessmen Tuesday welcomed the announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that the head office of the Canada Development Corporation would be moved here within two years.

Albert Hall, president of the Bank of British Columbia, said the new office would be a welcome addition to the financial community on the west coast, but said the head office should be established here immediately instead of waiting for two years.

Gerald H. Stevenson, acting president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said he was not in favor of the corporation, "but if we're going to have one, let's have it here."

'We Won't Bail Out Firms in Trouble'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canada Development Corp. will not be used to bail out firms in financial difficulties, several of the corporation's Montreal-based directors said Tuesday.

"We are not going to rescue anyone—there is no way," Sidney Maislin, a CDC director and vice-president of Maislin Bros. of Montreal, said.

"We are interested in building a strong company which will be of interest to shareholders."

The CDC was formed by an act of parliament nearly six months ago but its senior executives and directors were named Monday.

Besides Mr. Maislin, chairman of the board Anthony Harrison and five other directors are from Montreal.

The corporation was established to allow Canadians to invest in Canadian enterprises. It will have an authorized capital of $2 billion, and 90 per cent of this will be open to Canadian shareholders.

On Football, and Jonas, And Russians, and Things

The post Grey-Cup scene, or one record that was missed. Governor-General Michener, on the opening kickoff, got 33 yards, 20 in the air, 13 on the ground, and one more than Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau got last year.

Then there was the announcement before game time... "and not on your program, No. 10, Jerry Keeling of Calgary Stampers..." Incidentally, it was Keeling's tackle that saved the day for the Stamps, befitting the all-star defensive back that he once was when he stopped Dick Thornton of the Argos on the Calgary 11. Also, when he was asked why he, and the Argos player nominated, hadn't attended the Schenley nominators' dinner meeting, coach Leo Cahill said simply: "It was my first time here, I didn't know what I was supposed to do, or where I was to go." Upon which Jim Duncan, of the Stamps, tagged Cahill as a candidate for the foot-in-the-mouth award, by saying: "He's lying; I told him about it last summer." If it was said in jest, it at least pointed up Cahill's in-dependence.

CBC's Ted Reynolds, who was in charge of press, radio and TV, said the media was represented by 377 people, from across the country, another record... but busy as he was, looking after their needs, he spent much of his time explaining how Vancouver got the short stick in its bid for the World Aquatic championships the previous week in the Far East. "We didn't lie enough," he said of the Vancouver bid, which incidentally cost about $40,000 to present; and officially it was a bigger share of TV revenue that got it to Yugoslavia (Belgrade).

The Russians... They Never Forget

The comment of the Russian delegate was interesting, too. When he was revealing to the Vancouver delegation that, "Sorry, you didn't win," he also remarked, "Now you know how we felt at Amsterdam." It was at that Dutch city one year ago last May, that Montreal was awarded the 1976 Olympic Summer Games, and Moscow was rebuffed. The Russians had remembered, after all.

People on the mainland aren't certain, either, if there really is a tobacco ad ban in effect. On the huge replay screen at Empire Stadium, a screen that never has been used for what it was intended, and likely won't ever be, is a sign saying simply: Players... It wasn't there before cup time... And apparently, there was no attempt to cut down on the other Grey Cup fun either... The Schenley awards, which were well done, went off without a hitch... and the most appreciative winner of all was Winnipeg's Don Jonas... And therein lies another tale.

It was after the awards, and Jonas was saying: "I really didn't know whether to come to Winnipeg or not. After I was traded from Toronto, I applied for a high school coaching job in Florida... I got a phone call from Earl Lunsford before I heard about my high school application, and really, as I still thought I could play professional football, I decided to give it one more try." Jonas went on to say: "There may have been more worthy winners of the Schenley (Canada's outstanding football player) but none will ever treasure it more... or make a more sincere effort to live up to what the award means to me..."

'He May Have Saved the Ball Club'

Maurice Smith, sports editor of Winnipeg Free Press, added the comment, "If Jonas is glad he came, think how we feel in Winnipeg..." He filled the park, saved the season, and may have saved the ball club. He gave us a new life, the most exciting team we've had in years, and if we can get a couple of big studs in our line next season, watch out... It was Smith's 26th consecutive Grey Cup... If he deserved a medal, for that devotion he's getting something just as good. He's been asked to accompany Winnipeg's team of hockey oldtimers on a tour of Europe early next year... "I think I'll accept," he said... On the WHA, Smith suggests that no, he wouldn't be surprised if Jets' owner Ben Haskins offers Bobby Hull even a million dollars to come and play in Winnipeg. "That's what he would need to sell season's tickets," said Smith... And Don Duguid, the world champion curler, is making nothing but money out of his title in several business enterprises, and is so busy he doesn't have time to curl any more.

What they were saying: Jim Duncan: "I'm glad the game is out here; I won't have to try and understand that (censored) French."

Leo Cahill: On the synthetic turf at Empire Stadium as compared to Toronto's CNE grounds: "It's like we died and went to heaven."

Herb Caplan: On Monsignor Athol Murray, 89, who said grace at the B.C. Centennial dinner: "I asked the good Father what he thought about priesthood and marriage, and he answered: 'Not as often as I used to.'"

Punch Imlach: On the fact he wasn't surrounded by reporters on his arrival in Vancouver: "There must be another game in town."

Western Universities Complete New Circuit

Formation of the Canada West Athletic Association, comprised of universities in British Columbia and Alberta, was finalized at a three-day, weekend meeting in Calgary. Charter members include the universities of Victoria, British Columbia, Alberta, Calgary and Lethbridge.

Lou Goodwin of Calgary was elected president, while Jim Day of Lethbridge was named vice-president.

Formation of the Canada West Association follows an earlier creation of the Great Plains Athletic Conference, which includes the universities of Saskatchewan (Saskatoon), Regina, Manitoba, Winnipeg, Brandon and the Lakehead.

The Western Canada Inter-collegiate Athletic Association will cease to exist next May, although the five football schools — Calgary, Alberta, B.C., Saskatchewan and Manitoba — will continue to operate a separate conference.

The new associations will continue to encourage a broad-based athletic program by offering competition in 15 sports for male competitors and 10 for women.

Eligibility regulations will be slightly modified from existing WCIAA regulations. The one major exception involves the fifth-year of eligibility which is permitted only when completed at the same university as the fourth year.

Cougars Call Up Puska For Four-Game Junket

Victoria Cougars, currently en route to Brandon for their first game of a four-day road trip through the Prairies, have picked up a defenceman from their farm system to help bolster their chances of escaping the Western Canada Hockey League's Western Division cellar.

The Cats open against the Wheat Kings on Thursday and finish off a rigorous schedule with games against Winnipeg Jets on Friday, Medicine Hat Tigers on Saturday and Calgary Centennials on Sunday.

Cougars' acquired Terry Puska, a 17-year-old Ladysmith player, from Penticton Broncos for the trip.

Puska, who played with Nanaimo in the Vancouver Island Junior "B" League last season, attended the Cougar training camp and was one of six players assigned to the B.C. Junior League club.

He was picked up to replace Murray Worley, left at home with a chipped bone in his wrist and a cut on the left arm required 12 stitches following Saturday night's game in Memorial Arena.

Gary Donaldson, the Cougars' leading scorer, also missed the trip. He is recovering from a tonsillotomy.

In league action Tuesday, the first three teams in the Western Division kept in step by scoring victories.

Edmonton Oil Kings retained first place with a 5-3 win over Winnipeg, Centennials stayed one point behind in the runner-up slot by downing New Westminster Bruins 3-2, and Tigers kept pace in third spot with a 6-3 decision over Vancouver Nats.

Wildcat action came at Calgary, with New Westminster coach Ernie McLean providing some unusual entertainment after Doug Horbal scored with 40 seconds remaining to give Centennials the victory.

Enraged by the goal, McLean tossed his club's sticks on the ice — which promptly produced a team penalty. Then, when the game was over, McLean leaped on the ice to pursue referee Graeme Smith.

In the fourth game Tuesday, Saskatoon Blades hammered Swift Current Broncos 7-3 to take over the Eastern Division lead from the idle Wheat Kings. (See summaries on Page 13.)

Independents Upset First-Place Hotelmen

Independents climbed a notch higher in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League on Tuesday by upsetting first-place Hotel Douglas 69-66 at Highrock Junior High School.

In the other game, Metropolitans collected their second victory, in nine starts by defeating Restoration Services 71-61.

The Independents' victory, their second in as many nights, moved the club within four points of Hotel Douglas.

Chris Hall paced Independents with 20 points while clubmate Bob Burrows chipped in 17. Independents led 36-33 at the intermission.

Corky Jossel led Hotelmen with 22 points and Tom Hatcher contributed 17.

Mike Mitchell scored 14 points, 12 of them during the second half as Metros erased 2-29-27 half-time deficit.

Robin Allen led Restoration with 18 points, one more than the total accumulated by teammate Ed Steele.

Shawnigan Lake

Glenlyon scored a try in the second half Tuesday to snap a 6-0 half-time deadlock and defeat Shawnigan Lake Boys' School 16-4 in an exhibition rugby match at Carnarvon Park.

Richard Hibbert and Angus Izard scored tries for Glenlyon and Izard supplied one convert.

An under-14 match between the schools at Shawnigan Lake was won 14-8 by the host squad.

HILLCREST CAPTURES BOOT TITLE

Striker Gary White scored two goals in the second half Tuesday to lead Hillcrest to a 4-1 victory over Fairburn in the Victoria and District elementary school soccer final at Royal Athletic Park.

St. Louis Enjoys Instant Success

By Canadian Press

Happiness in St. Louis is a National Hockey League trade reaping instant success, something the Blues were short of this year.

Fortunately for coach Bill McCreary, New York Rangers couldn't wait for Jack Egers, to blossom as a star. So they unloaded him, along with rookie Mike Murphy and defenceman Andre Dupont, on to St. Louis.

And if ever a change was as good as a rest, such was the case of Egers; a failure in New York, a star in St. Louis.

The 22-year-old left winger from Sudbury, Ont., teamed with Murphy and centre Garry Unger, fired his seventh goal in eight games since the trade and set up another score Tuesday night as the Blues rocked California Golden Seals 5-2.

In the only other scheduled game, Vancouver Canucks upset Chicago Black Hawks 4-2.

Tonight's action has Los Angeles Kings at Montreal Canadiens, St. Louis visiting Toronto Maple Leafs, Buffalo Sabres at New York, Pittsburgh Penguins entertaining Detroit Red Wings and California moving into Bloomington, Minn., against the Minnesota North Stars.

KEY TO TRADE

McCreary said this week that Egers, a 6-foot-1 175-pounder, was the key to the trade so far as St. Louis was concerned, replacing Gene Carr as the gleam in the eyes of Blues management.

He also feels St. Louis came out on top of the deal since Egers, Murphy and Dupont have contributed a great deal to the St. Louis resurgence.

Since the trade, which also sent forwards Wayne Connelly and Jim Lorentz to the Rangers, the Blues have recovered from an early-season tailspin and show a respectable three wins and three ties to move into a share of fourth in the West with Philadelphia Flyers and Pittsburgh Penguins.

Unger, obtained in a trade last year with Detroit, took Egers' arrival as a stimulant after a slow start. He contributed a goal, his 11th, and assisted on scores by Jim Roberts and Egers.

The Seals, who have won only one and tied two of 18 games on St. Louis' ice in five years, held third in the West with 19 points, 15 behind second-place Chicago.

CANUCKS AGGRESSIVE

The Hawks ran into a surprisingly aggressive skating Vancouver club that registered its second straight win over the Hawks on the West Coast this season.

Dave Bakon and Wayne Connelly, both of whom came from New York the day after, Connelly was sent to the Rangers by St. Louis, scored a goal each as did linemate Andre Boudrias.

Dennis Hull, at 9:19 of the second period, offset Balon's goal but scores by Connelly and Wayne Maki produced the victory that denied Chicago a chance to regain first in the West from Minnesota.

The win moved Vancouver into a fifth-place tie in the East with Detroit, six points behind Toronto and five ahead of Buffalo.

Kennedy Holds 'Total Power'

The National Basketball Association's advisory committee has announced that total power of administration is being conferred on commissioner Walter Kennedy.

"The owners feel," Abe Pollin, chairman of the committee, said, "that the complexities of running the NBA, as it is now constituted with 17 clubs, necessitates the conferring of total power of administration on the commissioner."

The NBA spokesman said the action makes Kennedy the most powerful administrative figure in United States sports. Kennedy now has full and final jurisdiction of any disputes involving two or more clubs without appeal. However, in cases of individual fines or suspensions the action will be subject to an appeal to the board.

Elsewhere in sport... Edmonton City council has decided to bid for the 1978 Commonwealth Games. Mayor Ivor Dent will go to Montreal, Dec. 11 to present the bid to the Commonwealth Games Association of Canada, which will decide which city will be the Canadian choice as host for the Games. If successful, the Games would be held in Edmonton July 20-29, 1978.

Defenceman Guy Lapointe of Montreal Canadiens has undergone surgery to repair a fracture of his right cheekbone.

Lapointe is expected to be out of the National Hockey League team's lineup for at least two weeks.

The accident occurred in Montreal's 4-2 loss to the Red Wings Sunday when Lapointe was struck just below the right eye by the puck.

A Seattle businessman and part-owner of Portland Blazers of the National Basketball Association, has expressed interest in a joint Portland-Seattle major league hockey operation.

"If there was some viability in this arrangement I would have some interest," Herman Rogation Vachon, recently traded from Montreal Canadiens to Los Angeles Kings in the National Hockey League, made some permanent arrangements Tuesday.

He quietly slipped across the international border from Montreal to Burlington, Vt., with a television and newspaper researcher, wended his way through a maze of legal technicalities with the dexterity of a forward intent on reaching the goal, and was married. The goaltender went before a Burlington justice of the peace with Nicole Marie Blumhard for the quiet ceremony.

He declined further comment on Drake's campaign.

Joe Kryczka, president of the CAHA, said in Calgary "our position hasn't changed, neither has Hockey Canada's or the government's regarding the Olympics next year because the European's position hasn't changed."

"As I said before, they're the same teams in both world and Olympic competition — there's nothing different about it."

He declined further comment on Drake's campaign.

Drake was referring to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Hockey Canada.

"I believe that if we are to compete in the annual world hockey championships that this competition should be open and that the best available cities of Canada should form the representative team. What a lot of people don't realize is that this is the first time ever that the two competitions (the world cham-ionships and the Olympics) have been separated.

Perhaps, Drake said, "Canadians feel that the critical distinction is that if we were able to win then it's all right."

"Do Europeans really corner the market on hypocrisy?" Drake said Canada needs a pinnacle of achievement for all its amateur development programs, "and the pinnacle of achievement for the 500,000 players that may not play professional hockey should be

Steelhead Competition Diverted by Protests

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Plans to hold a promotional "steelhead contest" apparently dissolved in the face of public concern during the early part of this week. . . first announced Nov. 21 as the "King Steelhead" contest, the format had been changed to a "King Winterfish" competition by Tuesday of this week. . . a change was made to encompass only winter spring salmon after a hue and cry by Island steelhead anglers. . . and to quote from Tuesday's new announcement: "The proposed steelhead division of the winter contest has been postponed indefinitely. . . the Vancouver Island chapter of the Steelhead Society of B.C. drafted a resolution at a Sunday meeting in Courtenay in which they went on record as opposing the original derby chapter president Barry Thornton said Monday: "We feel a long-run derby of this sort is detrimental to the sporting image the steelhead deserves. . . and Island regional supervisor Charlie Lyons of the fish and wildlife branch added his "personal" opinion that "commercializing any sport such as this is not to the benefit of the sport."

We agree wholeheartedly. . . the steelhead is a trophy fish which has few equals as far as fighting ability goes on the North American continent. . . and since steelhead depend on natural propagation to maintain their numbers at the present, in streams that are subject to abuse from a variety of sources, we feel that placing a "bonus" on the catching of these sea-run rainbows may lead to some extra greediness which could tip the balance in a few of the smaller and easily accessible haunts. . . besides, isn't the landing of a steelhead a worthy enough accomplishment in itself?

Meanwhile, plans of another sort might have been scuttled by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission blast on Amchitka Island. . . a third transplant of sea otters from Alaska to the B.C. coast, tentatively in the works for this coming summer, may have been shot down following the report by Associated Press on Monday that the Nov. 6 nuclear test may have killed over 1,000 sea otters. . . and there is no evidence that the animals had moved out of the areas. . . the blast evidently killed 15 per cent of an estimated population of 8,000 of these marine mammals. . . the wire story went on to point out that although the viability of the herd might not be affected by the kill, "experimental harvest and transplant programs will probably have to stop" . . . as yet, marine mammalogist Mike Biggs of the Nanaimo biological station, who directed previous operations in co-operation with the provincial fish and wildlife branch, has received no word on whether the application for another transplant has been turned down by Alaskan authorities. . . but he said that a stoppage of another transplant would be a big disappointment. . . "we've made a lot of preparation for it."

Some of the earliest laws in North America dealt with the harvest of wild animals. . . which settlers relied upon to a great extent for food. . . as early as 1846 the Rhode Island town of Portsmouth closed "deer" hunting from May until November. . . violators of the law were liable to a fine of five pounds if caught.

And talking about money. . . it's something that our fish and wildlife branch could use a lot more of. . . when budget time rolls around it seems that a department that administrators what is responsible for a large percentage of the annual tourist influx should get a larger share of the pie, right? . . . out of $8,753,087 allotted to the department of recreation and conservation for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972, only $2,727,929 went to the branch. . . in contrast $157,969, 221 went to the highways department.

Some words to ponder from the desk of John Madison, assistant director of conservation for the Winchester-Western division of a well-known sporting arms and ammunition-manufacturing company:

"In recent years I have gotten into a number of campus environmental sessions, I tried to rap with the students, and sometimes could, but there was usually a gap between us that was just too many marshes and weedpatches wide. Sooner or later, there would come a point where I would weigh quality of environment in terms of wild places, fish and wildlife—and that's where I would lose most of the eco-activists."

Fish, wildlife and wild places seemed irrelevant to most of them and their causes, and I came away with the feeling that the New Ecology is strictly human ecology, couched in strictly human terms. Not an interrelationship of man to total environment, but an interrelationship of man to man within synthetic environment—and if the gods guys win out, our children will inherit an earth that is sub-divided, sanitized, and certified non-poisonous. And which is damned dull, I might add."

Right on, John. . . too often nowadays, if we might use an old cliché, one can't see the forest for the trees.

Thorburn Misses Record

TORONTO (CP)—Hot-shooting Cliff Thorburn came within a whisker of tying a world record Tuesday night while taking four of five games from Ken Shea of Dartmouth, N.S., in the North American snooker championships.

The Vancouver player ran a 91 in the third game of the night, missing by nine points his sixth century run of the tournament. The pink ball just rimmed the pocket and sat on the edge.

Only two others have run 100 or more points six times in a single tournament—Joe Davis of London, England, while world champion, and the late George Chenier of Ottawa who was North American champion at the time.

Shea opened fast, taking the first game, 107-22, and led the second game, 55-23, when Thorburn caught fire and ran the table to win, 62-56. From there on it was the Vancouver shooter's night.

Thorburn, formerly of Victoria, now leads the best-of-71 final 20-10 with play continuing tonight.

LEO CARDENAS
goes to California

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—General manager Harry Dalton, who constructed a powerhouse in Baltimore, now is cleaning house in California.

The former Orioles' front office boss, famed for landing big talent and building championship teams, took only five weeks in his new position with the Angels before making a deal.

Dalton obtained veteran shortstop Leo Cardenas from Minnesota Twins Tuesday for left-handed pitcher Dave LaRoche and added he might not be through shopping.

Angels Cleaning House

Twins Swap Cardenas for Fireman

"With the acquisition of Cardenas, that makes Jim Fregosi available to be traded," said Dalton, who says he would deal the former American League all-star shortstop for "anyone who can help us."

The Cardenas-LaRoche deal was the lone major league trade Tuesday after an explosive opening-day session Monday that involved 13 players in three lightning trades.

"I know Cardenas is a good player," said Minnesota manager Bill Rigney, "but I felt we really had to do something about our relief pitching."

"We need someone to get the other side out in the ninth inning. And LaRoche just may be the best left-handed relief pitcher in the American League."

LaRoche has won nine games in two major league seasons, including a 5-1 mark last year that featured nine saves and a 2.50 earned-run average.

The 33-year-old Cardenas has long been one of baseball's premier shortstops who hits with authority. The 12-year veteran, who spent his first nine seasons with Cincinnati Reds, drilled 18 home runs last season while batting .264, two points over his lifetime average.

The Angels were prodded to deal for a shortstop because of a heel injury that considerably slowed Fregosi.

"Fregosi could go to third base now," said Dalton, "or he could go to first base. Then, too, I might be able to make a deal for him."

The Angels' new GM has expressed an interest in Baltimore's slugger Frank Robinson, who helped the Orioles win four American League pennants and two World Series in Dalton's regime.

HOCKEY TIPS

By Bobby Orr

Before discussing the various positions on a team, let's examine the role of the coach.

Unfortunately in sport, when a team isn't playing well, the coach is the first to go. Hockey isn't the only sport that saw a Stanley Cup coach (Al MacNeil of the Canadiens) removed almost before he accepted the Cup. In baseball, Johnny Keane managed St. Louis Cardinals to the pennant and World Series in 1964 and left before he was fired.

A coach has a tough, demanding job. If he wins, it's because he has good players. If he loses, it's because he can't handle the team.

MacNeil is a good example of this. Our fans and some writers went after Tom Johnson when the Canadiens knocked us out in the first round.

But really, what did he do wrong in the playoffs? The series is a best-of-seven and the coach can't do more than figure out the best lines to match against the opposition.

On the ice, there is nothing the coach can do to lift the team. I mean, it's up to the players, not the coach. If he keeps the players in line, makes sure they are physically ready and directs the line changes, that's about all that can be expected of him. He can't score goals. And that's why Canadians beat us—we stopped scoring goals.

The coach didn't tell us to play cautious hockey. We did it without any urging.

Horsemen Fault Racing Officials

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba division of the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association has criticized the provincial racing commission, Winnipeg's Assiniboia Downs and the stewards of the last 56-day thoroughbred meet there.

Provincial association president Ralph Kennedy said high admission prices and inferior jockeys brought in near the end of the thoroughbred season caused attendance to drop.

Kennedy said a motion was passed at a Manitoba Association meeting on the weekend, asking the racing commission to appoint new stewards for the 1972 season.

He said he received numerous complaints last season from members about the steward's failure to take action when offences were committed.

Most of the complaints were about conduct of the jockeys.

The provincial association also passed a resolution to lower the minimum claiming price at Assiniboia Downs to $1,250 from $1,500, and the minimum purse for those races to $1,200 from $1,400.

Most races at Assiniboia Downs are $1,500 claiming. Kennedy said early starting dates for racing, set next year for May 5, are hard on horsemen and fans but all suggestions to the Assiniboia Downs management for a change have fallen on deaf ears.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER AN AIR CRASH?

Interviewing eyewitnesses, examining charred plane wreckage, analyzing flight data, listening to cockpit recordings — it's all in the work for members of A.A.I.D., the Canadian government's Aircraft Accident Investigation Division. The December issue of Reader's Digest reveals how this dedicated team of investigators will go to almost any length to pinpoint the cause of an air crash. They probe 600 accidents a year... and they will inquire into a Tiger Moth crash-up as meticulously as a major airline disaster. Find out how Canada's air crash investigators are working to make flying safer for you — in the December Reader's Digest. Get your copy today.

Worth, Gervais Surprised

EDMONTON — Two stunning upsets Tuesday featured the first day of play in the Canadian Open curling.

Hee Gervais of Edmonton, former world curling champion, was a last-rock 7-6 loser to Al Dudar, of Winnipeg, and Harold Worth of Delisle, Sask., who has Merv Mann of Saskatoon throwing third rocks, was defeated, 7-6, by Roy Talbot of Red Deer.

Gervais and Mann are both former winners of the event.

Sixteen of the 54 rinks which started the prestigious event were unbeaten after the first day. They included Kevin Smale, the British Columbia champion from Prince George along with some of the best-known names in Canadian curling.

Ron Northcott, of Calgary, a three-time world champion, and Edmonton-Peteran Matt Baldwin, a three-time Canadian champion and defending Alberta champion, were in the unbeaten 16. And so were Bob Pickering, many-time Saskatchewan champion from Milestone, and Sam Richardson of Regina, who helped brother Ernie win four world titles.

A Christmas for Mom —And How to Avoid It

Our resident standard-bearer of Women's Lib and no office is complete these days without one — has commanded me to write a few words about what a perfectly rotten time Christmas is for the captive housewives of the land. Rather than get beaten up, I am going to do it.

The dear girl is acting as if she had just discovered one of The Basic Facts of Life, but, of course, any male chauvinistic pig who has been married for more than a few minutes will know that it is but the simple truth.

Of all the holidays it is the one that may come closest to breaking Milady's spirit, her mind and her back.

For some two weeks of the time the children are at home from school in weather ideally suited for the tracking in of mud, sometimes snow and occasionally blood.

There is an enormous amount of shopping to be done in bitter, hand-to-hand combat with her kind and with a dwindling selection on the counters.

Depending upon her whim or her whim she's in an agony of preparation from the second week in December and may be still mopping up as late as mid-January. The great day itself, and those immediately fore and aft, are a cruel test of her stamina and her will to live. At the very climax of the celebration she is called upon to prepare the most ambitious and exhausting meal of the year in a house that, chances are, has gone just a little mad.

While all this is going on she must look her best for the numerous relatives and other jolly transients who will feel free to invade her privacy at any hour, unannounced, usually at moment of utter chaos.

Her children will be as badly behaved as they can conceivably be and this applies, more often than not, to her husband who, in the crucible of her ordeal, will quite possibly overdo the testing of the rum punch and be no good for anything.

These are precisely the points made by my Women's Lib chum (I think "chum" had better be the word) but what she forgets or has not learned is that this knowledge tests weightily on the conscience of every husband who has the tiniest spark of decency in him.

Though it took place a number of years ago I have offered my own true life story to show that we are not all totally insensitive — and also to demonstrate, perhaps, that there's really not much that we can do about it.

On that occasion I put the plan first to the children. Your mother, I said, has a rough time of it making our Christmas a merry one year after year. Let us this year, I said, have a special Christmas just for her. I explained my scheme in detail. Loyal little tykes that they were, they capitulated with hardly a whimper.

I then broke the glad tidings to my wife.

"No Christmas worries for you this year, my sweet," I said, oozing sincerity. "The kids and I have decided that we'll get a couple of adjoining rooms at The Empress. One for them, one for us. It won't be any more expensive than having it at home, maybe less. You'll have no house work. Just press the magic little button for room service and there you are. We'll have our Christmas turkey in the great dining room. No fuss, no muss, no dirty dishes.

"This year," I plunged on, "there'll be no influx of visitors on Boxing Day. This year we'll visit them and when we get back to the hotel all the beds will be made by the little Christmas elves. This will be your Christmas and it will be the best ever."

Now, did my wife leap up and down with joy? Did she fling herself into my arms with cries of heartfelt gratitude? Did she run to phone up less fortunate wives to boast of the great humanitarian she had married? She did not. She just looked a little bewildered and declared, "It wouldn't be right."

I did not accept this as an outright refusal until about a week later when it came to my attention that she'd ordered the turkey.

"You are not accepting our offer?" I asked.

"It wouldn't be much of a Christmas in a hotel room, would it?" she replied. "Not much of a Christmas at all."

"Well, if that's the way you wish it," I said and there the matter ended until that evening when my oldest daughter confronted me rather crossly.

"You should have known that Mummy wouldn't want any other kind of Christmas but the kind we always have," said she.

"Perhaps you're right," said I.

"Honestly, Daddy," said she, "you don't know much about women, do you?"

"I guess not," I said and I fought back my inextinguishable Mona Lisa smile.

Urgent Surgery Only If Fast Pace Keeps Up

If the surge of urgent cases for surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital continues, the day is coming when there won't be room for anything else, executive director Embert Van Tilburg said today.

The hospital has been swamped with urgent cases recently and will have to consider rearranging of operating room priorities early next year, he added.

There are nine operating rooms at St. Joseph's but only six or seven are in full use weekdays because of a bed shortage for patients before and after surgery.

About half operating room time is devoted to urgent and emergency cases. The time left for elective surgery may have to be cut back by about a third in January or February, said Van Tilburg.

One operating room team works on urgent cases Saturdays and there is an OR team on standby over weekends for emergencies.

"If this trend goes on, there will be no elective operations at all, just urgent and emergency cases," said Van Tilburg.

"I don't know what's going to happen; I'm very concerned what's going to develop over the next two, three or four years."

(It takes about five years from planning to completion of new hospital beds and detailed planning of additions to St. Joseph's has not begun.)

Introduction of a doctors' review system 18 months ago to speed patient discharges and free more beds enabled the hospital to cut its surgery waiting list to 800. But the increasing load has pushed it back up to 1,300.

Patients are now being booked for elective (essential but not urgent) surgery next July and August, he said.

Elective surgery is preventive medicine and a vital part of health care. The statistics demonstrate that once again we are losing ground."

Van Tilburg said that opening of the hospital's new day care surgery around March will help a little on hospital beds but create some problems of its own.

The day care surgery will handle about 15 minor operations a day where the patient does not need to remain in hospital overnight. It will be housed in a one-storey addition under construction alongside the emergency department.

The new space will free some room in the hospital where five or six cases a day are now being handled. But it will siphon off the easy operating room cases, leaving time to be filled by more complex surgery requiring more intensive nursing.

Van Tilburg said the last thing the hospital likes to do is cancel elective surgery, where patients have been waiting for months for their operations.

But the load of urgent cases meant cancelling elective, schedules three times last month. About nine or 10 cases were involved.

Teachers' Jobs First Casualties In Budget Cut

Some Greater Victoria teachers will have to be discharged early in 1972 because the district does not have enough money to work with, school board chairman Allen McKinnon said today.

The board is faced with the task of cutting at least $750,000 from its 1972 budget after the provincial department of education provided the district with only a 5.6 per cent increase over last year's budget.

The amount the district is allowed to spend without going to the voters for approval was announced by the department today. All districts in B.C. will be allowed to spend $15,190 per instructional unit.

An instructional unit comprises 20 secondary or 30 elementary students.

This amount is multiplied by the number of instructional units in the district (1,271 in Victoria) to determine the basic education program.

For the Victoria district, when extras like special classes and transportation are figured in, the amount for the basic education program is $20,572,344.

The government allows the district to add eight per cent to this amount, giving the district a total of $22,218,132 to spend without needing voter approval.

McKinnon said the increase in this amount over last year's allowed spending is only 5.6 per cent, nowhere near the usual eight or nine per cent increase districts have traditionally been granted.

He said the department has put the Victoria board "in a very unenviable position" since at least $750,000 will have to be chopped from a budget trustees already considered "bare-bones."

That $750,000 figure is quite likely to get substantially higher, he said, since it allows for a teacher salary increase of 6.5 per cent, according to voters in an appeal for more operating funds would be "an exercise in futility" since the recent trend has been toward defeat of money referendums.

The only avenue left to the board, he said, would be to discharge teachers. This could be done as early as Jan. 1 since the arbitration results are issued Dec. 31. Teachers would be dismissed according to their order of seniority with the school district.

McKinnon said: "I can't see any other way but to dismiss teachers. That's what we'll have to do."

How many teachers will have to be cut will not be known until arbitration has determined how much of an increase teachers will receive.

He said the board would prefer not to cut out some of the special classes featured in the district.

McKinnon said he finds it "unusual" that the government can use what amounts to retroactive legislation to curtail spending by school districts.

Brothers has said he intends to introduce legislation in the 1972 session which would limit allowable spending to 108 per cent of the basic education program instead of the former 110 per cent. Although the provincial legislature does not sit until January, the limit is already being effectively tested, McKinnon said, since it is the minister who decides the basic education program for each school district.

The school budgets are approved in final form by the department April 20, giving ample time for the necessary legislation to pass through the house.

Department Policies Slammed By McKinnon

the limit set by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

If teachers are granted an increase in salary of more than 6.5 per cent (their dispute with the board has gone to binding arbitration) the additional costs involved will be added on to the $750,000, the board must delete from its budget.

For every percentage point over 6.5, about $160,000 will be added to the $750,000, McKinnon said.

"It's looking as big as a mountain right now," he said.

Even if the district does not replace teachers who leave for various reasons (retirement, death, change in domicile) only about $250,000 can be cut from the $750,000 total, he said.

McKinnon said to go to the Safety Measures Defended Following Near-Drowning

Safety precautions at the new Crystal Pool in Central Park were well within B.C. government regulations when a near-drowning occurred Tuesday, pool manager Bill Young said today.

Eva Chow, 9, is in critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital following the accident.

The girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yau Hon Chow, 974 North Park, was pulled from the pool about 1:45 p.m. by lifeguard Mike Vavra, 5997 Oldfield, one of five guards on duty at the time.

Police said after Vavra took the girl from the water, all five lifeguards applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in turn. Several lifeguards accompanied the child to hospital, continuing resuscitation in a police car.

Eva was among a group of George Jay elementary school students at the pool, which was in its third full day of operation Tuesday.

The girl was spotted by Vavra in four feet of water near the north end of the T-shaped pool, which has a maximum capacity of 800 swimmers. There were about 400 youngsters in the pool at the time.

Young said B.C. health department regulations require one lifeguard for every 100 swimmers.

"Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure safety in the pools," Young said.

"We have been a bit concerned that we would be caught off base in the early days because of the hectic schedule of opening week programs. There has been thorough planning to make sure we are not caught off base."

Disturbed Children's Ward Badly Needed, MD Says

Child psychiatrist Dr. Philip Ney said today he is both optimistic and desperately anxious that a ward for emotionally disturbed children open soon at the Eric Martin Institute.

The need is almost unlimited and very urgent, he said.

"For example, I have recently had to admit two pre-teenage boys who were trying very hard to end their lives."

"They had to be admitted for their own safety but we can't give them proper treatment on a ward of adults, some of whom are geriatric and others very disturbed."

"Other children that I have recently had to admit include a six-year-old whose hyperactivity day and night was literally driving his mother crazy, a 10-year-old who tried to hang his younger brother and a terribly depressed young boy who was convinced that he was the cause of his father's death."

Opening of a 20-bed children's unit on the empty sixth floor of the psychiatric hospital has been delayed almost two years by a dispute between the provincial government and Royal Jubilee Hospital over the way it will be staffed and organized.

Doctors and hospital have insisted a clinical director is needed. Health Minister Ralph Lofmark has said the government can afford a director or doctors treating their own patients on a fee-for-service basis but not both.

There is only one other children's psychiatric ward in the province, at Vancouver General Hospital.

Ney said today that in psychiatry as in other areas of medicine, children who don't receive proper care may be crippled or die.

"The only difference in children with psychiatric problems is that they die inside. You don't have to pay for a gravestone but you do have to pay chronic institutional care."

A BRITISH DOCTOR HAS written a little book, endearingly titled "You and Your Guts," but please don't ask me where a copy can be had. If I knew, I'd be nose deep in it right now, hunting for clues that might explain a slight ache in the vicinity of my belt buckle.

Since it didn't show up until I settled behind this typewriter, it is probably a psychosomatic protest by the inner man against work that can't be avoided. Or it could be induced by the tuna fish sandwiches I bolted while reading a review of the doctor's book.

In any case, it should respond to a qualified prescription handed out by the gut-prober in his tour of the human digestive system. This is not to worry: a piece of advice which he admits is much easier to give than to take.

Speaking for myself, I'd be lost without my own ever-changing little crew. That has never quite happened, although there was a year when I was forced to strain pretty hard for a worry large enough to give me a proper work-out.

Our children were doing well in school. Every story I wrote was accomplishing the all but incredible by finding a buyer on its first trip to market. None of us entertained even so minor an ache as the one that now seems to be shifting around toward my left kidney. The weather was perfect, our garden thrived, and the fishing was better than good. There is something unnatural about a state of perfection. Given a scope enough, it can even become a bore. Allow still more time, and it begins to generate its own vague worries. Back of these is the well-tested knowledge that tomorrow, if not today, the bubble must burst.

Ours burst. The weather turned sour. I strolled barefoot across a lawn drenched with weed killer and contracted an interesting case of foot

Two stories for which my hopes ran high were rejected in the same mail. Our car demanded a valve grind, and raccoons raided our peach tree.

Naturally, I griped both loud and long. But the change in our fortunes was accompanied by a feeling mighty like relief. It came, I suspect, from having something tangible to worry about once more. The thing can be overcome, of course, as even casual association with a deep-dyed, chronic worrier will demonstrate. I've known enough of these to realize that any attempt at cheering them up is likely to be taken as an affront.

I doubt that even the You and Your Guts, medico could do much for a confirmed hypochondriac with a well-stuffed medicine closet and a symptom for every day in the year.

It was once my bad luck to be a captive audience for a desk-mate of that persuasion. He was forever snuffing this or swallowing that; his favorite reading was a medical encyclopedia, and however a conversation with him might start, it presently developed clinical overtones.

Yet his appetite was only matched by his stamina, and in the year we shared an office, he was never afflicted by any recognizable ailment, not even a common cold. He was the happiest worrier I've ever met, and at last report, he was still enjoying his miseries.

It takes something in the nature of a catastrophe to set me worrying on that scale. But like most of us who on earth do dwell, I'm never short of a few of the minor worries without which life might lose its flavor.

That ache I mentioned seems to have taken itself off in the course of the discussion. But it comes to mind that one of my car's front tires looked the least bit flat this morning.

And if it isn't, I can always keep imagination exercised by wondering what's for dinner. Not to worry; but I hope it won't be liver!

Amchitka Otter Deaths Cited As Threat to B.C. Colony

An Alaskan state game department decision not to transplant sea otters from Amchitka to British Columbia and Oregon last summer may jeopardize the survival of the small herd off the coast of Vancouver Island.

Ian Smith, provincial biologist, said 42 otters transplanted from Alaska in 1969-70, are believed to exist off the coast.

"But they are scattered all the way up the island," he said. "With such a small colony it may be tough and go whether such a small number of otters can survive. We need more to insure that they will multiply."

Dr. Mike Bigg of the National federal biological station, said he hopes Alaskan authorities provide B.C. with 60 additional otters from King William Sound, an area which was not affected by the Amchitka blast.

Frank Jones, acting director of the Alaska State Game division, said transplants to B.C. and Oregon would not take place this summer primarily because of the effects of the underground blast on the Aleutian Island Nov. 6.

State fish and game biologists have estimated that 1,000 otters may have been killed in the immediate vicinity of the blast.

Jones said the transplant program probably would resume when the otter herd recovered.

The group will ask provincial and federal governments for funds to purchase materials necessary to cope with oil.

Halladay said the group is assembling a collection of literature on the best methods of treating affected wildlife.

The group includes private citizens and representatives of organizations such as the SPCA, Victoria Natural History Society and the Vancouver Island Game Bird Society.

Spill Squad to Save Wildlife

A plan is being prepared by a group of citizens to deal with the treatment of wildlife in the event of an oil spill.

Ray Halladay of the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch, chairman of the citizens' group, said there is "no question" that sooner or later there will be a giant spill near B.C.

He says that when this occurs it will be necessary to have a plan ready to deal with the problem of collecting and treating birds and mammals caught in the oil.

BEAUBIEN

Representation Lacking

Jim Beaubien says he "strongly believes that governments at all levels should be representative of the total community and obviously they are not."

He says the "present council represents a small segment of the community and sadly lacks social awareness."

The common good, he says, "would be best served when the representatives to council are from various walks of life and have different perspectives."

Baubien, a therapy technician at St. Joseph's Hospital has been in the nursing care field at the hospital for 18 years.

"My social concern has led me to be active in the hospital employee's union, on the executive of the Victoria Labor Council, with the Inter-denominational Religion and Labor Council, and in the development of the private hospital Union two years ago."

He says he has also been active in the Foster Parents' Association of the Family and Children's Service for the past two years.

Baubien says he would work for "people-oriented development for Victoria as opposed to a purely real-estate orientation with a proliferation of highrises along the waterfront."

The character of Victoria and quality of the environment should be preserved, as should parks.

"A rapid transit system should be built to solve traffic and parking problems, and light secondary industry should be encouraged to broaden the employment potential and the tax base."

Baubien also says tenants should have full electoral rights as well as a rent review board, and council should hold evening meetings to encourage public attendance. Council should also work towards realistic rates for senior citizens' rental housing, and institute youth self-help programs.

Not Available

Aldermanic candidate Joe Richards, one of the last to enter the Victoria council race, was unable to make himself available for an interview prior to today's publication.

Richards, a provincial government employee, will be covered in Thursday's times.

HEYNSBROEK

Active Woman Needed

Mrs. Joyce Heynsbroek, a registered nurse, says Victoria needs an active woman on council, and "I believe that I can fill that role."

She says everyone wants efficient local government "but this means more than mere administrative competence. It is axiomatic that the municipal organization be responsive to the needs and wishes of the people and that citizens should be permitted maximum participation in local affairs."

"With strong, intelligent leadership and a council composed of dedicated, able-bodied people of vision, I believe that Victoria can avoid the mistakes which have been made by so many North American cities."

Mrs. Heynsbroek says she is in favor of amalgamation of Victoria and surrounding municipalities and wants long-range, physical planning and preservation of park land and other green spaces.

She also says she favors dedication of Thetis Lake Park as permanent parkland and believes in public ownership of the city waterfront.

She says her experience of 22 years as a registered nurse and work on voluntary community organizations serving youth and the aged have given her the needed experience to play an active part on city council.

HOOD

Planning Review Essential

Alt Hood, chairman of the Greater Victoria Library board, says the planning process at city hall must be reviewed with the aim of rejuvenating the downtown area and resolving "problems related to waterfront development."

Hood, running a third time for a seat on Victoria council, says he will seek better cooperation between Victoria and surrounding municipalities and attempt to spur discussion of "all aspects of amalgamation."

He also says there must be financial incentives for construction of low cost and low rental housing.

Hood also wants to see on council more "rational debate leading to sound and timely decisions" and "administrative efficiency and sound financial management."

"Major decisions will be required in many of these fields which will have far-reaching effects on the city. It is vital that we have a capable, dedicated and responsive council in the city," Hood says, "and this is in the hands of the voter."

"Each candidate should be carefully assessed, his or her qualifications reviewed, their past contribution to the community considered. Only then can a decision be reached as to who is best fitted for the task."

"A vote for a friend of a 'good fellow' will do the city no good unless that person can make a real contribution to the running of the city."

Hood says eligible voters should remember they are not justified to criticize council if they fail to cast a ballot.

should be more child care facilities. For the elderly, the great anxiety about expensive chronic care nursing must be eased."

"As an apartment dweller myself, I feel strongly that we should have a vote on money referendums," a privilege at present limited to property owners.

Mrs. Richards says she has attended more council meetings at Victoria city hall than any other ordinary citizen in recent years and claims experience in municipal matters through organizational work on England.

"I have a good insight of civic affairs."

"I have observed town planning while travelling extensively in Europe and North America and I am convinced that high rises should not be on the Victoria waterfront."

However, the Old Town Report which advocates preserving much of the older architecture in downtown Victoria "has tremendous possibilities," she says.

"Our parkland should not be encroached upon for transit purposes, and I should like to see Thetis Lake Park dedicated as permanent parkland."

Separate bicycle lanes should be formed and lights and reflectors enforced.

"We might do well to copy the Scandinavian strict enforcement of no-drinking-driving laws and the compulsory wearing of seat belts."

She also says sewage treatment for Victoria must be "high" on the city's list of priorities.

ROGERS

Woman's Viewpoint

Sally Rogers says the "time has come for a woman's helpful viewpoint, wisdom and voice to be represented on city council."

Elected, she says her two main interests will be poverty and welfare, "both being primarily part of a woman's sphere."

"Closely related to these two subjects are parks, so necessary for the well-being of all citizens. Parks are always important and particularly now, since Victoria is growing very fast."

"Consequently there is an urgent need to retain a high quality environment before it is too late. Constant effort must be employed to preserve, enhance and if possible enlarge present parks and parklands and also acquire

ELLIS

Come to Grips With Issues

Robert Ellis, manager of the Victoria Credit Bureau, says the most important problem facing Victoria is the "inability of the city government to come to grips with important issues and find solutions."

"The endless decisions about highrise developments, transportation problems, convention centre, et cetera, is evidence of this situation."

"I believe that answers can be found for these and many other problems by aldermen with a capacity for decision, based on clear thinking, including the consideration of professional advice."

"I do not believe we want a city of high rises and freeways. I do believe that responsible Victorians expect a healthy degree of economic development so that already overburdened ratepayers are not taxed beyond endurance. Many life-long residents are now at the point where further tax increases will mean loss of home ownership."

Ellis, who ran unsuccessfully last year, says that as a third-generation Victorian he has a "growing regard for the traditions and charms that have made the city famous."

"I feel it is my duty to direct my energies to the preservation of this area both for the present population and for our children. With a sound planning strategy which will guarantee preservation of historic areas, but at the same time allow healthy development in specific sites, and provide a fully serviced light industrial zone, we can have the best possible city."

"My most vital project is the speedy development of such a plan."

Planned Development Is the Key Issue

Bill Tindall, Manager of the Better Business Bureau, says "planned development of the Inner Harbor for the benefit of the people of Victoria is one of the key issues in this election."

"An alderman must have the ability to determine the needs of the electorate and act in the interests of the majority."

"Urban development, particularly foreshore development, is a matter of direct concern to the taxpayers and I am not in favor of permitting our waterfront areas being used as speculative investments by promoters."

Tindall says preservation of beach promenades and parklands is "a must" and adds there must be more waterfront preserved in the manner of the Dallas Road shoreline.

"Apartment construction cannot be avoided in view of our expanding population. Lowrise and highrise apartment buildings can be built in suitable locations without restricting the freedom of the residents to enjoy our beautiful environment."

"I am opposed," he says, "to any further reduction in area of our parks and will strongly recommend the dedication of Thetis Lake Park."

"Decisions to be made for the present administration of city affairs and future development must be in the best interests of the taxpayers and the present atmosphere of indecisiveness must be avoided in the future."

SAVAGE

Development Control Prime Requirement

Incumbent Clyde Savage says "what Victoria needs is control over developments, control over zoning, authoritative terms of reference to our planning department so that adamant decisions can be made to ensure that we get the kind of progress we want."

"I do not want cement jungles, another typical American city, nor do I want traffic and development put before people. I maintain that we can have orderly development, work with promoters to ensure environmental amenities."

"Private enterprise can make this an interesting, exciting and liveable city, for us to enjoy if we make it economically feasible for them, and at the same time exercise those controls which are so necessary to our way of life."

Savage says he believes, the city should initiate, "with the support of the senior governments," a program of public ownership of land for residential purposes.

An immediate discussion with the regional district should be begun for taking over Thetis Lake Park from the city and dedicating it as permanent parkland.

Savage also believes the region should buy the Thetis Lake watershed.

"There should be a regional transit system, increased pressure to halt littering and air pollution, Savage says."

He says some kind of amalgamation of the core municipalities.

WITT

Get Back On Track

Incumbent Ove Witt says "It has been said this is a tough election because there are no real issues. Well, I can agree that all elections are tough, but I can't agree there are no issues."

"For almost two years now we have been wrestling on council with the issue of waterfront development, and neglecting two far more important and vital issues of the total downtown plan for Victoria."

"It seems to me that one of the first things we have to do in the New Year is get back on track and concentrate on total planning, rather than spot planning."

"I'm not suggesting ignoring the Inner Harbor. I think that's part of the total package, and a vital part. And I'm convinced that the joint city-provincial government committee will come up with the answers we've been looking for."

"There's an issue out at Clover Point where raw sewage still spills virtually on the beach at low tide. It's true the Regional District has a study in hand but I want more than a study—I want some action as soon as the study is completed."

"It seems to me there are dozens of issues, all important to the citizens and therefore to council members. The whitening away of parkland for roads has to stop; the consolidation of sports facilities in the Royal Athletic Park, Swimming pool, Memorial Arena, must continue."

Witt says that "every time I turn around I see another job that needs doing—that's the main reason I want to get back on council, so that I can use the experience gained over the past two years and get things moving."

ROGERS

additional park areas especially in the Thetis Lake area.

"Beauty and economy wisely applied will contribute to the enrichment of Victoria."

Mrs. Rogers also says long-range planning covering all phases of city activity is needed.

Problems to be resolved include the "rational size and location of highrises," pollution control and "keeping the downtown alive."

"There should be a continuing study of amalgamation and introduction of a 'better communication system which will clearly inform council members, civic departments, the press and citizens interested in Victoria's future."

"Having been actively involved with newcomers to Victoria and people in need since 1947, and fostering for over 20 years, I am now seeking office where my talents and experience can contribute to a greater measure of help, improving conditions of low-income families, women, children, youth and senior citizens."

Quebec Labor 6,000 WORK; 15,000 IDLE 'Must Fight'

MONTREAL (CP) — Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, has asked his organization to take wider political and social action because "I'm beginning to lose my patience."

Mr. Laberge said, in an interview Tuesday, following his address to the QFL convention, he was dismayed at the lack of concern by governments for human rights, as shown by the War Measures Act brought into effect in October, 1970, and the apparent readiness of government and the judiciary to side with management in major labor disputes.

In his speech, Mr. Laberge told 1,500 delegates society was not acting in the best interests of wage-earners and the QFL should help change it.

"If we don't," he said, "others will."

The QFL had to strengthen its roots in the various regions of Quebec and its local councils had to work with other organizations which favored the same objectives.

He said a united labor front is the only solution to Quebec workers' disputes with government, high finance and the courts.

DOESN'T WORK ANYMORE.

"Bargaining at separate tables doesn't work anymore," Mr. Laberge said.

The QFL had to take a larger role in politics, he said, because the business establishment used politics to fight labor. If no party fully satisfied labor's aspirations, the formation of a new party could be considered.

But he added that the Parti Quebecois best represented the interests of the workers.

"I am not saying that the nationalists' movements," Mr. Laberge said. "It's just that they seem to be fighting the same people we are."

The QFL, whose 225,000 members are about 10 per cent of the Quebec labor force, should devote itself to helping all wage-earners and "widen contacts with all wage-earners," organized or not organized.

The convention ends Saturday. The delegates have until then to decide either to accept or reject Mr. Laberge's proposals.

In a document distributed at the convention, Mr. Laberge listed six areas where the QFL could make its views known to government.

—All workers who are not trade union members should be organized by work sector.

—The minimum wage should be increased and a minimum guaranteed annual income established.

—Governments should have a coherent housing policy, stop land speculation by business interests and encourage the construction of low-cost dwellings.

MONTREAL (CP) — A report prepared for the Quebec Federation of Labor shows 15,000 Quebecers were laid off their jobs between Nov. 1, 1970, and May 4, 1971, while the federal department of regional economic expansion gave grants to industries to create 6,000 new jobs over a period of three years.

The report, prepared by economic researchers and distributed to delegates at this week's convention of the QFL, says 13,000 of the layoffs were in the manufacturing sector which the federal department is designed to aid.

The department designates certain regions across Canada in which businesses are eligible for federal aid to stimulate the local economy.

The QFL study says that under the scheme—the Gaspé, Lac St. Jean and northwest regions, traditionally the poorest parts of the province—received between October, 1969, and April, 1971, only 14 per cent of grants in Quebec and will get only 11.1 per cent of the newly created jobs.

From October, 1969, to May of this year, Quebec received $577 million for 213 projects designed to create 12,818 new jobs, the report said.

The economists who conducted the study claim the federal plan perpetuates foreign control of the Quebec economy.

Of 10 enterprises which received more than $1 million in grants each, none were Quebec-owned and seven reported net income for 1970 ranging from $14 million to $1 billion, the economists said.

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's English-language universities do more than simply serve the province's minority, the chancellor of Sir George Williams University said Tuesday night.

C. P. Carsley told the annual fall convocation at Sir George that "Quebec has a rare opportunity to be a world leader in many areas of academic excellence" because of the quality of its universities in both languages.

Mr. Carsley, who was formally installed as Sir George's chancellor at the ceremonies, said that in its quest to control educational resources, the government must be sure not to harm the development of the universities.

He defended the function of the English-language universities in Quebec, saying they act as "a bridge between the largest concentration of Frenchspeaking people in Canada and their English-speaking neighbors, not only in Canada, but in North America and the world."

"The existence of English-language institutions of higher education in a predominantly French-speaking province make us a unique society on an international level," he said.

YOUNG Planning Directions

Lawyer Mike Young, a member of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, says planning of the city needs more direction, from city council.

One way to improve development in the city would be to try to solve the problems created by highrise development before instead of after it is built.

Young says Victoria must avoid the type of growth that has made "soulless concrete jungles" of many American cities.

He does not believe the city must buy the Reid waterfront property in order to control development of the site, adding that the hope of turning the whole waterfront into a park is a "pipe dream."

He says council must respect the objections to the Reid centre voiced by Victoria citizens, and states council has no commitments to Reid. "All change in the Inner Harbor and downtown and James Bay areas should be based on plans that will not endanger the character of Victoria."

Young would like to see the formation of an advisory board to recommend preservation of certain landmarks and buildings that would preserve Victoria's character.

Emphasis should be on the quality of development rather than on the magnitude.

He is against highrise development anywhere in the city until the city has determined where and how it is going to cope with the problems of traffic and sewage and other results of dense development.

palities should take place, "at least in integration of services."

The Crystal Garden should be renovated into a community centre and convention facilities.

Death Report Blamed on Fatigue

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York state's deputy corrections commissioner, Walter E. Dunbar, Tuesday blamed fatigue and human error for his incorrect report that hostages' throats were slashed in the Attica prison rebellion.

Commissioner Russell G. Oswald, on the basis of what he heard and saw.

"I was tired after five days with two hours sleep a night," he said. "I saw hostages with knives at their throats and I saw one man who had been slashed from ear to ear."

"If I erred, I erred as a human being."

The first official disclosure of the throat-slashing report reached newspaper men outside the prison while a tear-gas and shotgun assault on the rebel prisoners was under way.

Autopsy results later showed that none of the 10 hostages killed died of a slashed throat.

Oswald, who also testified before the panel, denied that rumors of slashed throats influenced his decision to end the rebellion by force Sept. 13.

He said he resorted to an assault only after he "went down to the last wire" trying to end the rebellion through negotiations.

But several factors, he said, led him to conclude negotiations were doomed. The factors he cited were:

"The intransigence" of the prisoners in their refusal to meet with the officials in an area of the prison where officials would be safe from capture.

"The convicts' demand in the last two days of the four-day rebellion for total amnesty."

A letter from prisoners stating no more sick hostages would be released unless they were given replacements in exchange.

The release of a prisoner with stab wounds 2 a.m. Monday, Sept. 14, about six hours before the decision to storm the prison.

Intelligence reports that prisoners were making more weapons, including an improvised mortar launcher, and were electrifying their barricades.

Kissinger Explains

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his face-to-face talks with allied leaders, President Nixon wants to make sure all are moving in the same general direction on major new international developments, from agreement on Berlin to the economic crisis.

So says Henry A. Kissinger, the president's national security adviser, in explaining Nixon's rapid-fire summit parleys with five major allies before his Peking and Moscow trips.

Nixon will confer with Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau here next Monday. He sees President Georges Pompidou of France in the Azores Dec. 12-14, Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain at Bermuda Dec. 20-22, Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany at Key Biscayne, Fla., Dec. 28-29, and Premier Eisaku Sato of Japan at San Clemente, Calif., Jan. 6-7.

Speaking of "a dramatic change in the international situation that has occurred in the last seven months," since Peking diplomacy opened Nixon's path to Peking, Kissinger added:

Announcements of the unprecedented presidential journeys to China next February and to Moscow in May; last September's Big Four agreement on Berlin; the treaty returning Okinawa to Japan; Britain's forthcoming entry into the European Common Market; and "the whole economic negotiations."

CANADIAN COMPLAINT

Economics will loom large when Nixon starts with Trudeau, Canada, the largest trading partner of the United States, complains of heavy damage from the U.S. surtax.

The monetary dispute over dollar-valuation and the import surtax will figure in the Azores talks, too.

At Bermuda, Nixon is expected to stress that the United States does not want its goods discriminated against by the growing European Common Market bloc.

With Sato, Nixon will be dealing with the head of a government which has been dealt double shocks by Nixon's Peking and economic moves.

Joint Services Backed 'When Feasible, Fair'

By DONNA CLEMENTS

NORTH COWICHAN

Mayor Gerry Smith supports a joint service program with Duncan but says it won't be feasible for some time.

Mayor Smith, who is in a two-way fight for the mayoralty with Ald. George Whittaker, in the Dec. 11 election, said that if the two municipalities amalgamated such services as sewers and water now it would be unfair to Duncan taxpayers.

While Duncan owns its water system and practically owns the sewer system, North Cowichan still has another 15 years to go before these services are paid off.

"I'm all for joint services," he said, "but it would not be feasible for some time or fair to Duncan because of North Cowichan's debts."

Smith added that the sewer system in North Cowichan is more expensive because Duncan is so compact while its neighboring municipality is spread out.

At this time Smith said he also can't see any advantage in joint fire departments because it would probably entail a full-time fire department and the costs would be too great for taxpayers to bear.

If rejected, Smith said he will push for a joint water board with Duncan where the municipalities would obtain water together but distribute it individually.

"This is the only thing I can see that would be an advantage to work jointly right now," he said.

Smith said that North Cowichan must look into the development of another well for additional water for residents in the Southend water area.

He noted that if it wasn't for the 200,000 gallons of water per day supplied by the Crofton pulp mill during the summer months, and water meters that were installed in this area two years ago, Southend residents would run out of water in the hot weather.

Smith said he would also like to see a sewer referendum held in Chemainus and Crofton. He is concerned about the raw sewage flowing into areas where children swim.

He plans to "contingency" to provide improved recreational facilities for all ages.

Mayor Smith supports the concept of administration of parks on a regional basis "because North Cowichan is paying while the whole region is using them."

He said he will work to keep his municipality's general mill rate at the same level as last year.

"We were the only municipality or city in British Columbia last year that kept the general rate (excluding school taxes) the same as the year before."

Smith, 55, owner of the Horse Shoe Bay Inn at Chemainus, has been an alderman for 11 years and mayor for the past two.

"For the past two years I feel we have had a very constructive council. All of our endeavors have been successful," he claimed.

He lists among his achievements: an underpass for school children at Spruce Road and the Trans-Canada Highway; signal lights at James Street and Trans-Canada installed for the safe crossing of school children; considerable progress has been made to improve road construction and paying to conform with present day standards; additional and improved street lighting and parking facilities installed; construction of a fire hall at Maple Bay, and taxpayers passing a referendum authorizing the purchase of four new fire trucks for the municipality's four fire departments and construction on the Southend fire hall.

CANDIDATES TO SPEAK

NORTH COWICHAN — Several all-candidates election meetings are scheduled next week.

Candidates will present their platforms Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Chemainus Firehall; 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Westhale School; 7:30 p.m. Monday at Maple Bay Community Hall; 7:30 p.m. Dec. 7 at the Southend firehall, and Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at Crofton Community Centre.

The Cowichan Toastmasters' Club is sponsoring an all-candidates meeting for Duncan contestants on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the Duncan city firehall.

'Let's Work Toward' Regional Operation

NORTH COWICHAN — All-embracing regional administration should be the long-range objective for the Cowichan Valley, says Ald. George Whittaker.

The mayoralty candidate said the move can't come right away, but the bureaucracies involved should start working toward it right away.

"We can start now by co-operating and working towards reducing costs and increasing the efficiency of services."

Whittaker, who has been an alderman off and on for a total of 12 years, is running for the third time for mayor.

In 1952 he was defeated by then reeve Bert Beasley, and in 1969 he failed again when he ran against Mayor Gerry Smith.

Whittaker noted that "everyone gives lip service" towards joint facilities between Duncan and North Cowichan but nothing is ever done. There are not enough members on both councils who really feel like co-operating. Some feel that to turn over such services as water, sewer and fire departments to a joint board will reduce the prestige of their particular municipality.

Whittaker said the prestige of a municipality is not important.

"I feel that a municipality should be purely the tool to give services to people living in the area," he said.

"I feel all services should be under the regional district. Areas should be served by facilities and not limited by boundaries."

His move for co-operation between the "12 separate bureaucracies" is in the right direction, Whittaker said. "Not these bureaucracies are busy building their own empires and frustrating each other's efforts."

Whittaker said that all council, school boards and hospital boards should be administered under one body.

"If I am elected mayor I will appoint myself to the regional board."

the Cowichan Valley Regional District Board in 1958.

Other areas Whittaker said he would like to concentrate on are: the public works department, mainly setting priorities as to what roads should be worked on first; and to take steps to reserve an adequate water supply for the district.

Whittaker, who has lived in the Cowichan Valley for most of his 56 years, has degrees in political science and law.

He retired from his logging, mining and construction companies about five years ago.

His political career started when he was elected as a North Cowichan alderman in 1951.

Through his 12 years on council Whittaker has served on all committees. His chief interest is the department of public works.

He now represents council on several committees such as the hospital board and the recreation commission.

Whittaker was a Cowichan school trustee for six years, the last year chairman.

He has been a director of the Cowichan Hospital Board for four years and is a director and secretary of Cowichan Co-Operative Services.

ARSON SUSPECT HOME TO U.S.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — A 12-year-old student, charged with arson after fires at the Cliffside Preparatory School for Boys, has been released into the custody of his parents and has returned to Washington.

Duncan family and children's court judge Lance Heard on Tuesday suspended final disposition of the charge.

Since first appearing in court two weeks ago the boy had been in Riverview Hospital undergoing psychiatric examination.

The first fire was contained in a closet in the science lab at the school. The second resulted in a $75,000 classroom building being destroyed on Nov. 10.

The cause of the third fire on Nov. 7, which did $100,000 damage to the school's dining room and kitchen, has not been determined.

Quebec Outlines Spending

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Raymond Garneau tabled a $132.8 million supplementary budget in the national assembly Tuesday and said there would be no new tax hikes or borrowing despite a $36.5 million increase in the deficit.

The budget, aimed at tackling unemployment and bolstering welfare programs, earmarks $59.5 million for the social affairs department and $21 million to the department of roads and public works. The remainder will go to other departments.

With predicted expenditures of $4,237.7 million and revenues of $3,933.2 million, the government expects a budgetary deficit of $304.5 million for the current fiscal year—$36.5 million more than Mr. Garneau predicted in his budget in March.

No tax increases or borrowing were necessary, Mr. Garneau said, because the government had recently borrowed $75 million to finance current spending and because of an increase in tax revenue.

Increased productivity, retail sales and sales tax revenues also had helped the government's financial picture, he said.

OTTAWA HELPS

The federal government is paying 53 per cent of the $80 million the social affairs department is going to pump directly into welfare programs, which Mr. Garneau says will help stimulate the provincial economy.

Most of the non-welfare money is being directed into pump-priming projects.

French Woman Free After Disappearance

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter) — French woman journalist Michele Ray was freed early today some 40 hours after she was taken from the home of a friend by three men and a woman claiming to be left-wing guerrillas, police said.

Police confirmed that Miss Ray, who appeared to be in good health, was left at the home of her friend.

She strongly denied reports that it had been a "kidnaping," police added.

The gang who took her away said they "wanted to talk with her," said Uruguayan lawyer Esther Gillo, owner of the house where Miss Ray is staying.

CBC Show Sparks Pun-Filled House Exchange

OTTAWA (CP) — A CBC television program about a homosexual "marriage" sparked a pun-filled exchange in the Commons Tuesday.

Don Jamieson, the transport minister, emerged from it with an accolade from Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton/The Sydneys) that "in every way possible, he is a real man."

Prime Minister Trudeau suggested the whole program might be regarded simply as "a fairy tale."

But Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland-Colchester North) said that, although the topic was producing much laughter, the idea of a marriage between two male homosexuals is "vulgar and distasteful" to the bulk of Canadians and the taxpayer should not have to stand for it.

Mr. Muir started the exchange by saying that the CBC program televised Tuesday night would be run in a half-hour of prime time. Actually, the program ran for a full hour.

"Do you need more time?" Mr. Jamieson interjected, starting the first gust of guffaws.

"That's pretty good, Don," Mr. Muir replied. "You must know something about it."

When the noise subsided, Mr. Muir said he wanted to know whether the program was "intended as entertainment or propaganda."

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the question out of order.

But Mr. Coates returned to it, saying there should be an answer since the taxpayers support the CBC.

Mr. Trudeau got off the "fairy tale" crack, saying it had been suggested by a Liberal MP behind him. Then he suggested that perhaps Mr.

Muir should withdraw his "kind of slur" about Mr. Jamieson.

Mr. Lamoureux said the whole exchange just reinforced his opinion that the matter should have been dropped.

But Mr. Coates said there had been no satisfactory answer. Why was such a program being aired in "family viewing time?"

That went unanswered but

Mr. Muir bobbed up on a point of privilege.

He had the highest regard for the transport minister, he said, then added his opinion of Mr. Jamieson being "a real man." More guffaws.

LOSING BATTLE is waged against piling snow by young boy in Toronto as the city's first winter storm struck. Snow kept falling on southern Ontario's roofs until Tuesday afternoon.

Talk Turns Tropical As the Snow Swirls

OTTAWA (CP) — Snow swirled and the wind howled around the Parliament buildings Tuesday, but inside the talk was of flowers and tropical plants.

At issue was the leafy decor of the finance department's new skyscraper home in midtown Ottawa, and the $75,000 bill for it.

"Extravagance of the worst order," said Alfred Hales (PC-Wellington) in the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

Hales, who is also chairman of the Commons public accounts committee, a watchdog on the public purse, renewed his attack later in the House of Commons.

"An extravagant waste of the taxpayers' money," he continued.

"Flower power," shouted another Conservative.

The committee debate began when Robert Bonnar, a finance department executive, said the $75,000 worth of imported plants was to help guard what he called the "visual privacy" of those working in the new quarters.

The miscellaneous estimates committee has under consideration supplementary spending estimates of $872 million tabled by the government earlier this month for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

Supplementaries of the finance department include $715,000 to cover a planned move from the Confederation Building, just west of Parliament Hill, to a new office tower about a quarter-mile away, where it will rent several floors.

The plan is a sore point with backbench MPs, who fear the government intends to uproot them from their offices on the Hill to take over premises being vacated by the finance department.

Bonnar, questioned by Paul Langlois (L-Quebec), described the proposed layout as an "open-office type of landscaping." Tropical plants and various types of screen will generally take the place of walls.

He said the system of plants and screens will cost no more than walls would.

In the Commons, C. M. Drury, treasury board president, said the flowers would be "office landscaping" in a plan to use them as "rather more economical" partitions than an ordinary wall. There were boos from the opposition at this.

Hales said artificial flowers would be cheaper.

BANDIT REPELLED

ST. PAUL Minn. (AP) — Gertrude Lindsay, 75, was outgunned but not outdugged by a man who tried to hold up her grocery store.

She sprayed a chemical irritant into the face of a gunman and was, in turn, narrowly missed by a bullet from the man's gun. He fled without any money, police said Tuesday.

The Kooky World of Dr. Seuss

By JUDITH MARTIN
Special to the Times

"All over the country, there are millions of children who require nightly doses of Dr. Seuss' relentless rhymes and cockeyed drawings before they can sleep. Some are so hooked that they need Dr. Seuss television specials, too, and are beginning to crave Dr. Seuss toys and Dr. Seuss furniture.

It's affecting the adults. Otherwise normal people find that the price of satisfying their children is to live out their lives with their heads permanently filled with things like "I like to box. How I like to box! So, every day, I box a box. In yellow speck I box my box. I box in yellow box box socks."

The source of all this is Theodore Geisel, a scholarly looking gentleman who says he's been saving his real name for 67 years in the hope of attaching it to the great American novel, and who awarded himself a doctorate to save Oxford University the trouble of doing it. Seuss is his mother's maiden name.

Saved Father $10,000

"My father sent me to Oxford to become a professor of English literature," Geisel said, "and I figured I'd save him about $10,000 by not staying but just fixing the title there myself. The business of getting a doctorate in literature is amazing, anyway. There've been two doctorates and three master's degrees from these ychtr s ey you have to do is copy something out of my profile in the New Yorker, and you get a doctorate."

"Of course, it has to be on something new, and I guess I mustn't new enough. They're scraping the bottom of the barrel. At Oxford, I met the greatest Swifthan authority, Emile Legguise, and he persuaded me to go to the Sorbonne and do my thesis on Swift. After I got moved in, he told me that nobody knew if Swift had written anything between the ages of 16 1/2 and 17, and that if I could find anything from that period I'd really have something. Well, I thought it over for one day, got a ticket on a bad boat to Corsica and have been out of the teaching world ever since."

His next big triumph was a job advertising Flit insecticide. "For 17 years, every week I did at least four pictures all with the same caption, 'Quick, Henry, the Flit!' The one good thing that Adolf Hitler did was to get me out of that job."

family

WENDY DEY - EDITOR

I was overage when the war started, but I enlisted. I had to get out of there.

"The army sent me to Hollywood. It was the Signal Corps, and we took over the Fox lot. At one time, I was in charge of soldiers not getting syphilis. I made movies with a message. The message was, 'don't do it.'"

It was while he was on the Flit job that Geisel became what he calls "the Typhoid Mary of magazines. Every magazine I've ever worked for has gone bankrupt, and it's not my fault." He did adult satire, writing and drawing, for the old Life, Judge, College Humor, Liberty, Vanity Fair and Colliers, and political cartoons for the newspaper P.M.

"I got some of that out the other day. Do you know what the Wickersham Report was? I don't have any idea, but I certainly was very angry about it once."

The Flit contract was "fat," but it precluded my doing anything else, and I was going crazy. I could finish up a year's work in six months. I finally found that one thing it didn't specify I couldn't do was children's books, so I started doing that just to do something. I never made a living at it until several years after the Second World War, when the babies born on the G.I. bill of rights began appearing by the millions."

His first book, "And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street," had that Seuss rhythm because, he claims, "I was on a Swedish ship on the worst crossing ever, and I sat in the bar and listened to the engine's grind, da da da da da da, da da da da da da. It turned out to be 'Twas the Night Before Christmas and All Through The House,' but Swedish boats work that way. I got back and found I was walking around with that rhythm in my head, and I wrote the book to get it out. Self psychoanalysis."

From there to his latest book, "The Lorax," which is about the pollution done by a threed factory and won him a Keep America Beautiful award, he has 35 books, with about 65 million copies in print.

His Wording 'Wild'

Geisel is president of the Beginner Books division at Random House, and has what he calls his novels (in which the words are wild and made up and your mother has to read them to you), Beginner Books, such as "The Cat in the Hat," for first graders learning to read, and bright and early books for the even younger set. "We're going into pre-natal books next year," he said, "but we have a couple of technical difficulties."

"Adults are just absolute children, anyway," he said. "Children want to laugh. Half the adults in the country laugh for their bosses. The captains laugh for the majors, and the majors laugh for the lieutenant colonels."

But that doesn't mean he's got to live with the kiddies. "I wouldn't say I was an habitue of the kindergarten. I've never tried to write for kids — sit on my knee, little boy, and I'll tell you a story — I write for myself." Most children's books condescend — and that means contempt — in trying to put Dick and Jane out of business."

Indian Women Learn To Manage House

CLUNY, Alta. (CP) — Getting up in front of the class to speak was the hardest thing to learn for 12 Indian women, representatives of their reserves, who attended a course in teaching household management.

"Taking leadership is our biggest problem," said Connie Rabbit Carrier, smiling a little self-consciously during the last session of the five-day course.

"We had trouble at first talking to the group, but there has been a lot of improvement."

The course, a joint project of the Alberta agriculture department and the federal Indian affairs department, was part of a series of week-long courses to prepare the women to help district home economists teach home management classes on the reserves.

Home Economist

Barbara Stroh, home economist from Camrose, coordinated the program, which included sewing, cooking, budgeting, nutrition, family life and leadership courses.

The women, who came from the reserves South of Edmonton, were mostly chosen from homemaker groups on their own reserves, said Vera Macdonald of Edmonton, provincial home economist.

The women will be mainly responsible for organizing women's courses on the reserves, providing transportation and finding facilities, she said. In most cases, a district home economist will teach some of the classes, with the Indian women holding practical work sessions.

Explain Things

"Some of the older ladies don't know how to speak English," said Geraldine Wolf of Cardston. "We'll interpret and explain things."

The Indian affairs department is arranging to pay the women for their work in the communities, Mrs. Macdonald said.

During the course, which was held at a residential school on this reserve 60 miles east of Calgary, the women made a shopping expedition as part of their budgeting and management course. They set up a bulletin board showing some of the things they learned about comparative shopping and prices.

Cheaper Grades

They found standard grades are cheaper but just as nutritious as fancy grades in canned goods, for example. Skim milk powder for cooking is less than half the price of homogenized milk powder.

They also found that co-operative bulk buying would save money.

During the week, the class prepared all its own meals, said Mrs. Stroh. Each woman made a stretch-and-sew garment and knitted a pair of slippers.

The women, most of whom are married with families of up to seven children, expressed satisfaction with the development of their practical skill in sewing and cooking.

Most said they thought the courses on the reserves would greatly help the other women. One problem the women hope to bring out at the courses on the reserves involves day-care centres. Centres are operating at Hobbema and Gleichen, but most of the women said they hope to initiate the centres in their own communities.

Biology student Al Meadows left university and went to sea.

Now He Catches Fish

There was nothing at university to anchor down Al Meadows, 22. So he went to sea.

Like Peter Welsh, Meadows is making a living at what used to be a summer job while attending university. He said he enjoys being a commercial fisherman and is good at it.

"And that's the main criteria for staying at any job," he added.

Three years of study in the University of Victoria biology department was a frustrating experience for Meadows.

"At university, I had no direction, no motivation, and no interest. I was just putting in time."

He said he enrolled at university after graduating from high school because of family pressure and lack of alternatives.

"University was the be-all and end-all. When I went up there, I found myself lost."

The transition from studying fish to catching them wasn't difficult for Meadows.

"I've been a fisherman since age four," he said. "During the summer, I was employed as a deckhand on a commercial boat."

A month ago he became the owner of a 40-foot boat, the Lyravich, which is now docked for the winter at the wharf near the Johnson St. bridge.

The commercial fishing season lasts four-and-a-half to five months, Meadows said. During this time, the fisherman may have to work up to 20 hours a day, seven days a week.

"I prefer working at a job where I can compress the working hours, rather than working a 40-hour week all year round," he said. "After I put in my time, I can do whatever I like."

One of his winter occupations is marine conservation. Meadows has been involved in such projects as the feeding Coho fry at a Sooke stream to increase their chances of survival and sandbagging Goldstream during the salmon run.

If he had graduated and taken a job with the government in the conservation field, he would not be able to accomplish as much as he can now, Meadows said.

"In the civil service, you have to go through all the channels before you can do anything. This means waiting for years while a survey, feasibility study, and cost-benefit ratio are completed to determine the merits of your proposal. Meanwhile, all the resources are going downstream."

"You don't need a university education to make it in this world," he concluded. "You need to show some hustle."

Books Weren't Enough

The dream of many a parent, straining his back for a buck, is "something better" for his children. A college education seemed to be the answer. But, apparently, many university students don't agree. A number have abandoned text books to earn their daily bread by the sweat of their brow.

Three former students — a fisherman, a carpenter and a counsellor — left university because they could find no meaning or future in their studies. All three said they like what they are doing now. They feel they have successfully channelled their idealism and creative energies into practical work.

Engineer Finds Satisfaction As Carpenter

Peter Walsh, 24, is a civil engineer on paper — and a carpenter by trade.

What started out as a way of making money for studying has ended up a full-time job. After Walsh graduated in July, he was unable to find work as an engineer in Victoria.

There was a demand for carpenters, however.

He is now employed by a contractor to remodel and refinish houses. In his spare time, Walsh makes furniture and musical instruments. As well as earning a good living at carpentry, Walsh gets satisfaction out of seeing something completed that was made by his own hands.

"I can't play a musical instrument, but I'm good with tools," said Walsh. "Everyone has a talent. Working with my hands — that's my talent."

Besides deriving a personal pleasure from his work, Walsh feels he is doing something constructive for mankind.

"People need shelter and furniture," he said. "I try to build houses that people will enjoy living in."

To Walsh this means building each house and stick of furniture differently.

Walsh said he tries to adapt his work to the personality of the person he is working for.

The lady of the house we were last working at was small. Therefore, we built the shelves and laundry room so that she could easily reach things. It's these little things that make all the difference.

Come spring, Walsh hopes to be running his own company up north in the Cariboo country. He has no aspirations to become a prime contractor, but prefers to work on a smalltime basis with one or two crew members.

Philosophy major Cathy Sharkey now full-time Cool-Aid worker

Practical Philosophy

Philosophy was Cathy Sharkey's major at university.

And it was philosophy that made her leave, she said.

"It made for a change in my attitude. I realized what I wanted to do. Before I just knew what I didn't want to do."

"Trying to improve the situation," is what Cathy, 20, wants to do. She feels that she is accomplishing this in her job as a staff worker for Cool-Aid. Last February she was pushing a broom part-time as well as studying, when she saw an ad for a staffer in newsletter put out by Cool-Aid. After working a month without pay on a trial basis, she was hired full-time.

And a full-time job it has turned out to be. "I have to be here seven days a week," she said. "Sometimes I get a day off."

She has gone without sleep for as long as two days. Even during a quiet Sunday evening watching television, Cathy has to keep her ears open for the phone or knocks on the door. If a kid should freak out on bad drugs in the middle of the night or another emergency crops up, she and the other staffers have to be available to help.

"At university, life was always something that would happen in the future," she said. "I was very naive about what goes on."

In her work, she has been confronted by many different situations and people and has learned how to cope with both, Cathy said.

There was the time she had to try and hold down a 250-pound alcoholic who was having a combination of epileptic seizures and alcoholic "withdrawal fits" for eight hours.

"His wife had gone without sleep for four days because the man had to be watched constantly. She had phoned all the hospitals but none would admit him. Finally she called us in desperation. When I got there the man was bashing around the room with his face all covered with blood."

"Eventually Cool-Aid was able to get hold of a doctor who saw to it that the man was hospitalized. And his wife finally got some rest."

The hours of work or pay are not important so far as she is concerned. "It's whether you like what you are doing," she said.

"My work with Cool-Aid is not just a job, but a way of life," Cathy said.

Princess Anne Non-Smoker of Year

LONDON (UPI) — The sportswoman of the year, the society reasoner, must also be a non-smoker. That being so, she must be non-smoker of the year as well.

So it was that the British Society of Non-Smokers announced they have chosen Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth, their non-smoker of the year.

She will receive her award at the society's annual "non-smoking concert" in London's Caxton Hall.

Besides the Princess, an accomplished horsewoman, other sportsmen and women figured prominently in the society's list of nicotine resisters.

Scottish boxer Ken Buchanan, now world lightweight champion and British sportsman of the year, ranked number two, behind the equestrienne Princess. Others included rugby star Barry John, racing driver Jackie Stewart, and entertainers Dora Bryan, Spike Milligan and Nicolas Parsons.

Single Mothers Given Little Consideration

Three hundred and sixty thousand mothers in Germany have to bring up their children on their own. A small number of them recently attended a reception held by President Gustav Heinemann. Dr. Helga Stodter, a Hamburg lawyer, examined what life is like for them in Welt am Sonntag, a Hamburg newspaper.

HAMBURG — When President Gustav Heinemann recently met a group of widowed, divorced and unmarried mothers at Palais Schaumburg in Bonn he was the first German head of state to show interest in the fate of these women and children who normally benefit little from the blessings of our affluent society.

A large number of mothers come into this category. Of the 7.3 million families with children under the age of fifteen 360,000 are only half a family, because the mother lives alone with her children.

More than a million people are affected — 140,000 widows, 133,000 divorcees, 86,000 unmarried mothers and a total of 734,000 children under fifteen.

The government too recently turned its sights on this section of the population when the Minister of Health published a report on these mothers and their dependents.

Statistics confirm what experts have long known. The personal and economic position of these women and children is poor, much worse than it should be in view of the sacrifices made by the mother.

Although almost all of them have to bring up their children without the help of the father and although most of them also have to go out to work their average net income is low.

About a third of all married mothers go out to work but the figure rises to 39 per cent with widowed women with children, 71 per cent with divorced women with children and reaches a peak of 85.5 per cent with unmarried mothers.

But a widow's average earnings total only 590 Marks a month while a divorcee earns 550 Marks and an unmarried mother 510 Marks. The Mark is now worth approximately 20 cents.

Attitudes Reflected

These figures reflect social attitudes. Widows attract sympathy, divorcees are treated with indifference and unmarried mothers are still looked upon with contempt by many people.

The problems faced by these mothers are well-known. They have a double accommodation for another thousand children and often have the double strain of being a mother and going out to work. But they are given little help, if any.

Neither Bonn nor the Federal States or local government authorities have any clearly defined program to help these mothers. Only the main symptoms of the condition are cured, if anything happens at all.

The main symptoms are evident from the statistics. For years the mortality figures for illegitimate babies have been twice as high as those for children.

Illegitimate children are 14 times more likely to be brought up in a home than legitimate children. Though they only make up five per cent of births, 70 per cent of the children in homes are illegitimate.

This figure does of course decline in the course of time but this is balanced by a rise in the numbers of the children of divorced and widowed mothers.

Ninety per cent of the children brought up in homes in one Federal state were from families where there was only one parent, usually the mother.

Why is this the case? Bringing up a child in a home is often inevitable and for the good of the child. But frequently mother and child have been left in the lurch. Many authorities still believe that "it lies in the nature of things" for a mother to leave her child in order to earn money for them both.

In one city 29 per cent of all illegitimate children are sent to a home immediately after birth. Costs for taking care of them approach 1,000 Marks a month. The mothers could take care of their children for much less.

But instead of implementing effective measures for mother and child to remain together, the authorities are building more and more homes. Eighty million Marks have been set aside for providing accommodation for another 1,000 children in South Germany for example. It has been estimated that 40 per cent of the children in homes need not be there. That is a colossal figure when it is considered that children at homes are subject to "hospitalism," a serious mental complaint that seems unavoidable even with the best of care and can rarely be cured completely by later treatment.

Healthy children are being made mentally sick every day and society has not recognized its responsibility. Acting on the principle that attack is the best form of defence, people are demanding effective measures to make adoption easier.

Sweeping Judgment

One member of the Bundestag made a sweeping judgment when he used the word irresponsible to describe those mothers who were unwilling to allow their children to leave the homes where they lived and be adopted.

Children in homes are not the only ones to suffer. Children brought up by their mother alone suffer under the uncertainty of maintenance payments from their father.

When they are young, they suffer from the fact that their mothers have to go out to work. In the Federal Republic there is no effective financial aid through social schemes for mothers who live alone with their children.

The children suffer from the lack of care and attention while their mothers are at work. There are too few day nurseries in the Federal Republic.

They suffer from the housing shortage as mothers who live alone are not given priority on council housing lists and are rarely informed that they can receive subsidies.

Help would be possible if everyone in a position of responsibility — and that means practically all of us — paid some attention to what should be done.

But where are the members of the Bundestag and Provincial Assemblies who will sponsor the necessary Bills and force these bodies to discuss the position of mothers living alone with their children?

Where are the local authorities that will introduce effective measures in the field of social welfare?

Where are the staff of youth centres and social welfare bodies whose initiatives are not suffocated by the weight of routine work and who can suggest new courses based on past experience?

Where are the many women who complain that their children have grown up and left home leaving both their house and existence empty?

They could take in a mother and child and look after the child when the mother goes out to work, receiving both rent and payment for taking care of the child.

The Lady Is a Wrestler

MONTREAL (CP) — It's a long way from a charm school to a wrestling ring.

Vivian Vachon can tell you all about that route. She has travelled it.

She can tell you about the night in Tuscaloosa, Ala., when a little girl belted her with a two-by-four. When Vivian grabbed the board, the kid threw sand in her face.

She can also tell you about the night in Rimouski, Que., when a drunk ripped off her bathing suit.

She can tell you of growing up with her brothers, wrestlers Mad Dog and Butcher, as the youngest of 12 children in Montreal.

Vivian, 20, a five-foot six-inch blonde who tips the scales at 160 pounds, is a woman wrestler and her goal in life is simple.

She wants to be world champion.

In her dressing room before a recent match in Montreal — a first for the city with women in the ring — Vivian was restrained, articulate and introspective as she discussed her plans for the future.

A few minutes later, as she entered the arena to a chorus of stentorian boos and practiced obscenities, she assumed an entirely different role.

"You tramp," screamed one dowager as Vivian made her way to the ring.

Shepherded by her two brothers — total weight 540 pounds — she did not have to worry about two-by-fours and facefuls of sand.

After the charm school bit and a brief fling at modelling, Vivian decided to be a wrestler "because it sounded interesting."

So, for the last two years she's wrestled in places like Oklahoma City, Raleigh, N.C., Minneapolis, Waterloo, Iowa, and Stillwater, Okla., averaging five cities a week.

"I hated school," she said, "so I quit after Grade 10. Injuries? Sure I've had a few."

"One night in North Carolina, I busted my sacroiliac. I was in hospital for 14 days."

She says the catcalls and obscenities don't bother her. "I enjoy it, it's a challenge."

In her Montreal appearance, Vivian wins the third fall and the match and her brother holds her hand up in victory. Projectiles arrive in the ring at about the same time as the first chorus of boos.

Vivian tries her best to look the heavy. It doesn't work.

Perhaps that is because, a few minutes before the bout, she had been seen by her dressing room with her brother's young daughter.

She held the child in her arms and was gently rocking her to sleep.

Phosphates Banned

MIAMI (AP) — Soap-makers fighting to keep clothes-brightening phosphates in detergents will lose their first major metropolitan market Jan. 1 when Dade County begins enforcement of a total ban on the water-polluting chemical.

By a vote of 7 to 1, the county commission Tuesday defeated last-minute efforts by Procter and Gamble and the Soap and Detergent Association to gain a one-year delay in the ordinance outlawing phosphates.

The companies had testified during a month-long campaign against the ordinance that it would force them to pull out of the Miami market and suffer millions of dollars in losses.

Grant said the FDA also planned to begin issuing regulations early next year for voluntary nutritional labelling of foods so consumers could tell the content of calories, protein, vitamins and other nutrients.

Consumers apparently do alter their purchasing habits when nutrient listings are available to them," Grant said. "However, it remains to be seen which type of labelling design is most helpful to the consumer."

He said the scientific committee which recommended the guidelines "felt that only minor changes... such as increased protein and the use of iodized salt, would considerably improve an already nutritionally acceptable product."

The standards would be voluntary. Food processors adopting them could advertise their dinners as meeting FDA nutritional guidelines, and spokesmen said they hoped this would force most brands to comply through competitive pressure.

Dr. Ogden C. Johnson, FDA nutritional director, said similar guidelines were being prepared for entrees such as canned stew and frozen macaroni and cheese products containing meat imitations made from soybeans and other vegetables; breakfast cereals, and snack foods.

James D. Grant, deputy FDA commissioner, said the standards were based on a belief "that the total calories in a convenience dinner should carry with them a balance of essential nutrients."

To meet the FDA standard, a frozen dinner would have to contain 4.6 grams of protein per 100 calories — double the recommended average protein-to-calories ratio for a person's entire daily diet. The protein ratio was doubled, an FDA spokesman said, because a frozen dinner is purchased as a meal providing "reasonably good sources of protein."

The standards also would stipulated that frozen dinners provide a nutrient-to-calories ratio matching that of the recommended dietary allowance for thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron. Vitamin A content would have to be at least 75 per cent of the recommended ratio.

In a speech prepared for the Value Control Council, an association of firms making diet foods and beverages, Grant said the frozen dinner guidelines — to be formally issued soon — were "a conservative first step."

Dr. Ogden C. Johnson, FDA nutritional director, said similar guidelines were being prepared for entrees such as canned stew and frozen macaroni and cheese products containing meat imitations made from soybeans and other vegetables; breakfast cereals, and snack foods.

James D. Grant, deputy FDA commissioner, said the standards were based on a belief "that the total calories in a convenience dinner should carry with them a balance of essential nutrients."

To meet the FDA standard, a frozen dinner would have to contain 4.6 grams of protein per 100 calories — double the recommended average protein-to-calories ratio for a person's entire daily diet. The protein ratio was doubled, an FDA spokesman said, because a frozen dinner is purchased as a meal providing "reasonably good sources of protein."

The standards also would stipulated that frozen dinners provide a nutrient-to-calories ratio matching that of the recommended dietary allowance for thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron. Vitamin A content would have to be at least 75 per cent of the recommended ratio.

In a speech prepared for the Value Control Council, an association of firms making diet foods and beverages, Grant said the frozen dinner guidelines — to be formally issued soon — were "a conservative first step."

He said the scientific committee which recommended the guidelines "felt that only minor changes... such as increased protein and the use of iodized salt, would considerably improve an already nutritionally acceptable product."

The standards would be voluntary. Food processors adopting them could advertise their dinners as meeting FDA nutritional guidelines, and spokesmen said they hoped this would force most brands to comply through competitive pressure.

Here's How to Warm Up Cold Charity

A deep respect for Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova and her work to help feed the world's starving, coupled with a childhood memory of Christmases in Denmark, has brought to life a charming little symbol for this year's Unitarian Service Committee's Christmas fund raising campaign in Victoria.

It's a small, heart-shaped basket, made from two sections of bright colored paper, cut and braided together.

With it goes a slogan "warm up cold charity... help with a heart."

Mrs. Hanne Quillevere, department of English at University of Victoria, and originator of the idea, told me the hearts have long been a traditional part of Christmas in Denmark.

"They are made in Danish homes by both children and adults. Candies and other goodies are placed in them. Then they are used to decorate the Christmas tree."

The slogan goes with a poster created in UVic's visual arts department by student Linda Brown and now to be found in every building on campus.

elizabeth

Mrs. Quillevere met Dr. Lotta for the first time last year, heard her speak and was immediately impressed with her sincerity and deep compassion for those she was trying to help.

"I decided I must take part in this year's campaign," she tells me, "and I wondered what I could actually do."

She Remembered

Relaxing at home after summer school and a long seige of marking papers, thought of the "jules hjerter" (Christmas hearts) came into her mind.

"It was a long time since I had made one. So I went to my mother, Mrs. Paul Jenner. She remembered."

With the help of friends, student volunteers and her mother, Mrs. Quillevere now has a basket full of hearts, ready to give to anyone who will donate "perhaps a dollar."

to Dr. Lotta's present "cup of milk" campaign.

The idea was officially unveiled on UVic campus Tuesday at a noon gathering in the Student Union Building, where Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova spoke.

The hearts were also shown at official opening of the Victoria campaign last night in St. John Ambulance hall, where Mrs. Quillevere made the first donation to the campaign. It was $91 given at the two meetings in exchange for hearts.

What she needs now is more volunteers to help make the jules hjerter. For it looks from enthusiastic response already received that they are going to become a Christmas status symbol here.

Easy to Make

"They are easy to make," Mrs. Quillevere explains. "Actually it takes only about two-and-a-half minutes for one." (I'll vouch for that. I watched her cut and braid a heart in less than that time.)

"A scissors, some good strong colored paper (Christmas wrappings are excellent) and you are in business."

Would you like to try your hand at making these little heart warmers? Even better still, is there a church group or organization willing to take the hearts on as a friendly salute gesture toward others in the world who are less fortunate than themselves?

Mrs. Quillevere's telephone number is 398-3889. Reach her there after classes at UVic.

For Refugees

The $15,000 Dr. Lotta is seeking in Victoria for her "cup of milk" fund is part of an all-Canada target of $1,345,000 in funds and gifts in kind to be used for relief of Pakistani refugees.

She points out that $1 buys 50 cups of milk, or a warm sari, a blanket or join cloth for these hungry, homeless people.

Then she tells you of Pakistani women "walking... walking... day and night in the freezing cold and the mud... not only starving but almost completely naked." And nakedness for a woman in India is "the greatest disgrace."

"You can help wipe out that disgrace. Make a heart! Buy a heart! Many hearts!"

Save Relationship

DEAR ABBY: Why do some grandparents feel that they can give their grandchildren anything they want for Christmas without even consulting the parents?

Our children have more toys than they know what to do with, and my parents have just told us what they plan to give their grandchildren for Christmas and we have told them that we disapprove. In the first place, we think the gifts are very inappropriate for our children, they are far too expensive, and we have no place to store them.

My parents say they are not asking us, they are telling us. Abby, don't you think they should respect our wishes? And what can we do about it?

—Upset

DEAR UPSET: Yes, I think your wishes should be respected. You could threaten to return any unwanted gifts and make good your threat if they insist on sending them anyway. But this would undoubtedly make it "rough sledding" for your relationship at Christmas, so I don't recommend it.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those unfortunate women who had only sons. Out of six children, I never had one daughter. Talk about rotten luck. That was the worst, I know what I am talking about because last Christmas I knew what a broken heart felt like.

The five older boys are married, and on Christmas and Thanksgiving, too, each went to HER mother's.

My younger son has a girl friend, and he went to HER house. Not one of my sons asked me if I had plans.

I am not a whining, complaining, clinging vine type. I am self-supporting, and can look after myself. This was the first Christmas without my husband, and I thought surely one of my boys would invite me to spend Christmas with him. I'm sure if I had had daughters, things would have been different. What do you think?—Mother of Sons

DEAR MOTHER: It's hard to tell. Some mothers have received the same treatment from their daughters. And some sons treat their mothers like queens. The little verse, "A son is a son 'til he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all her life," "ain't" necessarily so!

Five Seek Three Oak Bay Seats

Five men, two of them incumbents, are running for the three aldermanic seats in Oak Bay on Dec. 11.

The municipality has 9,798 eligible voters.

Norman Pimlott, 1356 St. Patrick, a life underwriter is seeking a second two-year term.

If re-elected, Pimlott says he will work for a senior citizens' low-cost housing project to be built at no cost to the taxpayer.

He says he will also work toward "adequate recreational facilities" for Oak Bay's youth.

CONSCIENTIOUS
He also pledged "the same conscientious approach to the orderly development of Oak Bay and to maintain the wonderful residential atmosphere which previous councils have created."

In the past two years Pimlott has served on the Juvenile Detention Board, Centennial Stadium Committee, Greater Victoria Public Library Board, Centennial branch library committee, zoning, fire and finance committees.

Brian Smith, 2720 Somass, a lawyer, is also standing for a second two-year term.

He says: "My main reason for serving on council is to prevent the spread of apartments in residential areas. Vigilance is always needed to resist spot zoning."

BACKS PARKS

As chairman of council's parks and recreation committee, Smith says he supports the development of new parks and park facilities.

"I feel strongly that we must protect and acquire parkland before the chance is gone forever."

Regarding highrise development, Smith asks: "There is serious doubt that highrises are either a social or tax advantage to Oak Bay and there is resentment to them in many locations. They're more appropriate in James Bay."

On recreation facilities — Smith would like to see a recreation complex referendum put to the polls in 1972.

On in-camera sessions — "Most public business should be in the open, it's much better handled in public. I'm against developers meeting privately with council members in broom closets."

REVISION

Larry Mann, 3621 Crestview, is a management-engineering consultant with the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service.

Mann favors revision of the trailer-parking bylaw which restricts parking of certain vehicles in front of the property lines. He would remove restrictive clauses "which infringe on the rights of the individual."

Mann is waiting to be brought to court, charged with illegally parking his trailer.

Mann wants a major plan for Oak Bay, covering 50 if not 100 years. He states consultants should be employed to prepare alternative programs with various population density and costs over 25-year periods for the programs.

SPOT ZONING

Against spot zoning in principle, Mann says if there was a need for spot-zoning in a certain area, and two-thirds of the residents in that area supported it, he would support such an application.

Mann considers Oak Bay's lack of recreational facilities "a disgrace," and does not favor the Victoria Riding Academy as a site for a recreation complex.

He says that in-camera sessions of council except for personnel or land sale or land acquisition, should only be allowed if all council members are in favor.

Elmer McEwen, 1906 Newport, owner of an Oak Bay shoe store, will be running for aldermanic office for the third consecutive year in Oak Bay.

UNSUCCESSFUL

A Victoria alderman from 1956 to 1960, McEwen ran unsuccessfully in Oak Bay in 1969 and 1970.

He wants Oak Bay to retain its quiet residential character and doesn't think that any more highrises will be built in the municipality.

McEwen feels that recreation facilities are "long-overdue" in Oak Bay and says there are other means of raising the money, apart from relying on proceeds from the sale of the Victoria Riding Academy land.

He declined to say what these were but added:

"The only fair way to do it (outline means) is in council. But we business people in Oak Bay get off very lightly. We're very preferred people out here."

He feels that money should be set aside in the municipal budget to allow for a planning department, to function and provide over-all planning on a long-term basis.

Douglas McLelland, 829 Transit, is an architect with the provincial government.

AIRED PUBLICLY

He is against indiscriminate development, highrises and encroachment on the residential atmosphere of Oak Bay.

All developers' proposals should be aired publicly from their initiation, he says.

He is adamant that Oak Bay residents should not be forced to battle developers at public meetings in order to preserve their neighborhoods.

"I believe that Oak Bay citizens have already made very substantial contributions to the community in the way they maintain and improve their homes," he says. "Oak Bay is not a highrise, high density, high pressure downtown development area."

In principle, McLelland is in favor of a recreation centre but feels that careful study should be made to see that such a centre serves all age groups in the community.

Jaycees To Re-Unit

QUEBEC (CP) — Albert

Cousineau, president of the 5,000 member Federation of Junior Chambers of Commerce of French Canada, said Tuesday his organization plans to reunite with the Canadian Junior Chamber of Commerce but on an international level only.

Mr. Cousineau said a meeting to discuss this reunion would be held next Monday in Ottawa.

The split between the two groups occurred a few years ago when the Jaycees refused to grant equal vote to the Francophone groups based on their numbers rather than on the one-vote-per-province system.

Enormous 'If' Hovering Over Smith's Head

By JIM HOAGLAND

NAIROBI (WP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith can claim at least part of the victory he repeatedly promised Rhodesia's white population during their six-year defiance of British colonial authority and the United Nations.

On a first reading, the Anglo-Rhodesian agreement announced last week appears to ensure that Smith's pledge not to allow African majority rule during his lifetime will be honored, Smith is 52.

If scrupulously adhered to, however, the agreement could negate his corollary pledge to continue white political control over the southern African country throughout the lifetime of the white settlers' children as well.

The "if" is an enormous one.

The agreement leaves the whites firmly in control of the pace of advancement of Rhodesia's 5 million Blacks to political equality and lacks several key safeguards insisted upon by the British government in past negotiations with Smith.

Sir Alex Douglas-Home, the British foreign secretary who negotiated the settlement, clearly has placed a great amount of trust in Smith's government, which unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 rather than accept British demands for progress towards majority rule.

The major concessions Smith appears to have made are to abandon the public commitment that Africans will never achieve more than parity in representation in parliament, and to allow at least some Africans to be registered on a common voting roll with whites at some distant time.

But on the crucial point of racially-discriminatory legislation enacted in the past six years, Sir Alec seems to have gained nothing more than a promise that the status quo will be maintained, and that the most controversial features of the Land Tenure Act will be held in abeyance, at least until it has been examined by a Rhodesian-appointed commission.

Once independence is granted, Rhodesia's high court becomes the final arbiter of the enforcement of this and the other provisions of the agreement.

Sir Alec insisted Thursday that the settlement comes within the terms of the Five Principles, the formula Britain had said Rhodesia must accept before independence would be granted. But the agreement appears to fall short of several of the principles, in spirit if not in actual letter.

The mechanism is sufficiently pliable for Smith to be able to assert that the agreement is closer to his Rhodesia Front's Sixteen Principles than the Five, largely authored by Sir Alec in 1963 and which Smith has in the past said he could not accept.

The British principles are these:

1. Unimpeded progress toward majority rule.

This has usually been formulated in terms of the guarantees embodied in the relatively liberal Rhodesian constitution of 1961, which allowed Whites and Blacks to register on a common voting roll under the same financial and educational qualifications, and promised majority rule eventually.

Sir Alec has now dropped all reference to the 1961 constitution, and agreed that the agreement would be affected by amending the 1969 republican constitution, which took Rhodesia out of the Commonwealth and established segregated voting rolls.

African representation was tied to income tax payments. For the 1970 election, Africans were given 15 members in parliament. Eight were directly elected, and eight were chosen by tribal chiefs, most of whom are paid by the White government.

About 8,000 Africans were registered that year. The 50 White members were elected by 87,000 registered Whites, Mulattos and Rhodesians of Asian descent.

The new "African higher roll," which re-establishes equality of registrations for Whites and Blacks, will presumably enable the Africans to increase their representation at a much more rapid pace than the present plan.

But the British acquiescence in adding four seats at a time, with two going to the tribal chiefs, leaves the White government with considerable influence over the African representation in parliament.

Thus, the Whites could still retain the upper hand when the crucial point of parity is reached, and provisions are to be made for a common voting roll that will elect 10 additional members who are supposed to hold the balance of power.

2. Guarantees against retrogressive amendments to the constitution that would nullify the terms of the agreement after independence.

The labor government's insistence in 1968 that a British judicial council should supervise key constitutional questions caused the last full-scale Anglo-Rhodesian negotiations to end in failure.

Sir Alec appears to have accepted Rhodesia's contention that this would be an untenable situation for an independence state. His guarantee seems to rest on Smith's agreement to include in the constitution a declaration of rights that will be justiciable in Rhodesia's courts.

Presently, Rhodesians may not appeal any violations of the declaration of rights to the courts.

3. An immediate improvement in the political status of Africans.

The British agreement to provide £50 million over 10 years, to be matched by the Rhodesians, for education and job opportunities for Africans goes a long way toward meeting this principle, as African voting qualifications will now be tied to income and education.

Currently, education is free and compulsory for Whites, Mulattos and Asians. It is neither free nor compulsory for Africans. The government spends about £10 million a year on African education. The parents of the 730,000 African school children must supplement teachers' salaries and other school costs.

The Rhodesian government has drawn strong criticism recently for effectively taking African education out of the hands of churches and other private groups, and turning it over to tribal authorities with little experience in modern education.

The promises to release 54 political detainees (about half the total now held by Rhodesian authorities) and to recruit more Africans into the civil service are potential pluses in Sir Alec's column on this point.

4. Progress must be made toward ending racial discrimination.

Sir Alec's critics are likely to centre their fire on his failure to get anything concrete from Smith on this principle.

The appointing of a three-man commission to review the "soft apartheid" legislation of the past six years is likely to be insufficient in their view, as is the promise to hold discriminatory laws to their present level.

The British seem to have left Smith a large loophole in agreeing that the commission's recommendation can be overridden "where there are considerations which any government would regard as overriding."

The cornerstone of Rhodesia's recent discriminatory legislation is the Land Tenure Act, which delineates half the country as White areas and gives the government the power to evict Africans from those areas.

The strong stand taken by Rhodesia's churches against recent evictions may have helped in getting Smith's agreement to stop at least temporarily such actions, but Smith has repeatedly said that the act is vital to his political program, and Sir Alec does not appear to have greatly budged him.

On the positive side, the commitment by the Rhodesian leadership to stop whitening away African rights could lead to a significant change in the tenor of race relations, which traditionally have been more relaxed than those of neighboring South Africa.

5. The British government has to be satisfied that the proposed agreement leading to independence is acceptable to the Rhodesian people as a whole.

The format of the test acceptability — a British appointed commission — has long been assumed. The conditions under which it will conduct its soundings are still unclear.

Rhodesia's state of emergency, which has been used to limit African political activity, will be lifted only after independence is granted and sanctions lifted, "unless unforeseen circumstances intervene," Sir Alec reportedly said.

The terms of the agreement reportedly provide for free television and radio time for the three parties represented in parliament to campaign on the merits of the agreement during the test of acceptability.

But the two major African nationalist parties are banned, and many of their leaders are in detention or jail. Those African nationalists who saw Sir Alec last week in Salisbury considered their contacts with him perfunctory, and they claim that Africans have had no say in drawing up the settlement.

Sir Alec gave no indication that he has won agreement from Smith that the African nationalist parties will be allowed to surface during the lengthy testing.

Over-all, the agreement appears to contain enough to win support from the tribal leaders favorable to the White government and perhaps from middle-class Africans who would like to see sanctions end and would accept any improvement, however slight, over the present situation.

But the young, educated Africans, whom Smith's government scorns as trying to upset traditional ways of African life, are likely to oppose it bitterly — if they get the chance.

Liberals Gearing for Win—After Bennett Retires

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

With only a handful of seats in the provincial legislature, B.C.'s Liberal Party can hardly be considered a threat to form the next government.

The party also faces a credibility problem. Liberal MLAs are based in Vancouver and Victoria, so voters in Interior constituencies doubt the party's interest in rural affairs.

ing president in March, he has shuffled Vancouver office staff, recruited a brain trust of 35 persons to prepare policy papers and visited "every town of any consequence" in the province.

He gives between three and four speeches a week to constituency associations and service clubs in an attempt to kindle interest in the party.

Couvelier predicts the Liberals will be debt-free by next May. He expects party coffers to be restocked from an extensive fund-raising drive emphasizing individual rather than corporate donations.

An even more intense effort is being aimed at doubling party membership to 40,000 persons by Dec. 31. Constituency associations have been instructed to nominate candidates by May 15 in preparation for an anticipated August 1972 election.

Provincial Liberal president Mel Couvelier of Victoria says the party must develop programs "attractive to rural voters if it hopes to win more seats in the next election."

He says the party will try to sell itself as the only free enterprise alternative to Premier Bennett. Interior voters are not yet falling away from the Social Credit fold, Couvelier, 40, of 3807 Campus Crescent, said in an interview this week.

But when Bennett goes, he wants the Liberals to have the jump, in the scramble for power. Early and thorough organization is the key to getting that jump, he said.

Couvelier is the first B.C. Liberal president in more than a decade to come from outside Greater Vancouver and is the party's first full-time president.

He sold his poultry business last spring to devote all his time to politics. Since becoming knew what we stood for. This time we'll hit three or four major issues in every important campaign speech," says Couvelier.

Lead issues will be chosen from a group of policy areas covering labor-management relations, industrial development, pollution control, welfare abuse, education and medical care.

Welfare abuse is a particularly sensitive concern of rural voters, says Couvelier.

"I didn't hit a town in the Interior that didn't have job openings," he says.

Interior residents have the impression that Lower Mainland workers do not want jobs outside Vancouver and prefer welfare. As long as jobs exist in the Interior, the feeling of welfare abuse will persist among Interior voters, he says.

A party committee of public relations people gets the job this spring of trying to sell Liberal policy throughout the province. Constituency associations are doing their election homework early by taking poll-by-poll surveys of voting patterns.

Practical tactics like these, says Couvelier, worked in Alberta and Nova Scotia, and should be successful in B.C.

He predicts Premier Bennett will run again and be re-elected with a reduced majority. He thinks the Socialists will be defeated if Bennett does not run. By winning 10 seats in the next election, the Liberals will have established themselves as the main threat to form the next government, Couvelier says.

He will seek the nomination in Oak Bay to run against Independent MLA Scott Wallace. The Liberals unsuccessfully tried to get Wallace to join the party after he quit Social Credit in August. As an independent, Wallace's chances for re-election are slim, Couvelier thinks.

"If people are interested in a change of government, they're sure not going to get it by voting for an independent," he says.

He predicts losses for the New Democratic Party in the next election. The NDP's trade union influence remains its weakest suit and the party is far from unified under Dave Barrett, according to Couvelier.

"There's a pretty strong feeling internally in the NDP that Barrett's got to go."

Couvelier says the Liberals will win seats from both the NDP and the Socialists. Voters in the Interior show no signs of disenchantment with Bennett, says Couvelier, though they sometimes get disturbed at his "autocratic methods."

These people believe the Socialists are dead without Bennett but have not begun to see the Liberals as a strong alternative, Couvelier believes the premier's weaknesses are his age, — he's 71 — and his strong majority (37 seats) in the legislature. The Liberals have five seats, the NDP 12.

The Liberal strategy assumes an election will be held next year, Couvelier does not think his organizing efforts will dissipate if the election waits until 1973.

The party's next convention will be held in Penticton May 20 and 21, 1972. Couvelier says he would not be surprised if somebody challenges party leader Pat McGeer.

"A leadership challenge might be healthy. It would give McGeer a chance to reaffirm his authority and stimulate interest in the party."

Bennett runs next year,

Couvelier predicts the premier will campaign against federal government policies. Couvelier admits Bennett may not do this if a federal election precedes the next provincial one.

The Liberals will run asking voters to approve new policy directions. One thing Bennett must not do, says Couvelier, is support the proposed Morlan Dam on the Fraser River.

"He will lose thousands of votes north of Lillooet if he proceeds with the Morlan Dam."

Couvelier explains that people called every radio hot line show he has appeared on in the Interior asking what the Liberal position is on the dam.

The position is no dam, support for nuclear power generation and investigation of the power potential of Hat Creek coal.

In the 1968 provincial election the Liberals won 20 per cent of the vote. Couvelier's remarks indicate he expects the party to do better next time.

But rather than gushing with optimism, Couvelier seems to be impatient with curiosity about the effectiveness of practical politics.

GRITS 'DISSOLVED'

The Victoria Liberal Association has been dissolved under provisions of the societies Act, but association president Frank Preston isn't sure if that is bad.

"It sounds kind of funny to me," said Preston, who added he was just about to call the companies office — which administers the act — to see what the problem is.

The problem, said an office spokesman, is that the association, which has more than 100 members and meet monthly, has not filed an annual report since 1964. This is against the rules of the Societies Act under which the association is registered.

SENT LETTER

Preston said he was not sure how useful it is to be registered under the act, because many constituency associations are not registered.

The companies office spokesman said a registered letter on the matter had been sent to the association March 31, 1971, to the group's last listed address, 536 Broughton.

The letter was returned. It notified the association that the annual reports had not been filed. The spokesman said a backlog of work caused the companies office not to have time to get around to checking which associations no longer meet conditions of registration.

Preston was quick to point out that the Victoria association is "properly accredited with the B.C. Liberal Association."

This should be good news to B.C. Liberal Party president Mel Couvelier who is counting on organization at the constituency level to improve the party's position after the next provincial election.

UN Needs Room

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — The UN will spend about $250,000 next year on increasing the seating capacity of its assembly hall and five main conference rooms. The budgetary committee approved Tuesday a plan by Secretary-General U Thant to provide seating for 142 delegations. At present, the assembly hall can seat 134 delegations, and the four main conference rooms and the trusteeship council chamber can each accommodate 130 delegations. UN membership is 131.

Bullish Bear Touts Common Stocks As Hedge Against Inflation

He's a bear about inflation and a bull for common stocks.

He represents the oldest and the youngest in Canadian mutual funds and holds views of investment covering a broad spectrum.

David Scott, of Montreal, is vice-president of Calvin Bullock Ltd. (affiliated with Calvin Bullock in New York and distributor of Canadian Investment Fund Ltd. since 1932), and president of Acrofund Ltd., formed little more than a year ago.

He visited Victoria Tuesday to tell stock brokers, salesmen and portfolio managers the virtues of investment funds as a tax shelter and hedge against the future.

BASIC THOUGHTS

In a few casual-sounding remarks delivered as he adjusted a slide projector, tested the lights and set up a display table in the Prince Albert room of the Empress Hotel, Scott bared some basic thoughts about economic and investment trends that sounded like time-tested truths.

In what sectors, he was asked, lie the best opportunities for investment gains.

"I guess it has been obvious for some time the banking area is one of the best areas to be invested in as inflation proceeds, and we think inflation is going to get worse in the longer term. Common stock investment is the best way to defend yourself against it," Scott replied.

A student of inflation and a man who started out as a banker, Scott reflects on a long history of inflationary periods followed by inflation-induced depressions, citing the French revolution and colonial American settings as examples.

And politicians, rather than stopping the rot, postpone it while and give it tacit recognition: "Politicians are acquiescing on inflation. They are saying a rate of 3 or 3½ per cent a year is acceptable. Pretty soon it will be up to 5."

"To keep up, they boost up the money supply," Scott said.

MONEY SOUND

"One commodity that can't be destroyed is money. The people who get the increased money supply are the banks, and I think the banks can maintain their margins (of profit).

"It's not their fault—the money supply is increasing; but they're taking good advantage of it," he said.

Scott said CIF, though getting a new key-shaped corporate symbol formed with its initials, has no intention of changing its stand policies.

"It will remain on the conservative side of the risk spectrum," said Scott. Yet, the fund has tended recently to be more aggressive in making moves when moves are decided upon.

For example, when it was decided to sell some international Nickel holdings — one of the royales of the blue chips — a token 10,000 was not enough.

The fund sliced off half its 160,000 shares to take advantage of the then $45 price. Recently, to the distress of some, Nickel has been down as low as $25½. Yet, as Scott will agree, Nickel remains a gilt-edged prospect for the medium term, in two or three years.

ACCUMULATION

In fact, it may be accumulation time for those who see the stock rebounding with a return to normal world demand for nickel.

CIF takes credit for calling the current interest cycle in time to take advantage by buying Bank of Nova Scotia, which was heavily committed in consumer loans and Euro-banking.

The fund seeks enough flexibility to be able to take advantage of short term opportunities, like the bank switch.

Natural resources remain an important investment sector for Scott's funds, and in oil and gas he sees no more than a temporary threat as a result of the National Energy Board ruling against higher export quotas.

"Mining? We're optimistic there, but it's going to be a bit longer term."

Acro's portfolio, he noted, is western-based in terms of asset distribution, giving it a strong resource basis.

Afraid to Open Your Mouth?

Bad breath often becomes a real problem for many people with deteriorating dentition... gum trouble, caps, bridgework and especially dentures. Only your dentist can rectify these conditions. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control accompanying bad breath. Steri/sol is specially designed for this purpose. Steri/sol's formulation contains an exclusive, active ingredient called Hexetidine that deprives bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live. In fact, Steri/sol with Hexetidine is so effective, it kills 95% of these mouth-germs within 15 minutes. Then it clings to the mouth and gum tissue to control bad breath for up to 10 hours. No wonder many dentists use Steri/sol. Try Steri/sol with Hexetidine. It costs more than you usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Park Signs To Show Facilities

Provincial parks soon will of pictorial signs giving information on the location and direction of facilities.

The signs are with a few exceptions identical to international park symbols used in Europe. B.C. parks branch director Bob Ahrens said Monday all Canadian provinces have agreed to use the system.

Agreement followed three years of discussions between the provinces and the federal national and historic parks branch.

A total of 22 signs will be used in B.C. parks. Ahrens said many parks will be equipped before the beginning of the 1972 tourist season.

Emergency Tip Needed For Landing

A light plane which crashed Friday, killing one police officer and injuring three others, was refused permission to land at CFB Comox just before the crash, a forces spokesman said Monday.

Capt. Tony Brett, public relations officer at the base, said the pilot had asked permission to land but "he didn't declare an emergency."

The use of forces airstrips by non-military aircraft is permitted only with prior permission from the base commander or in an emergency.

The plane, a Cessna 172 chartered by the police officers, was en route to Campbell River when it turned back in rough weather.

After being diverted from the Comox field, the plane hit a tree and flipped into the Courtenay River while attempting to land at the rougher unlicensed Courtenay field.

RCMP Const. Robert Mason, 29, of 1245 Lyall, Esquimalt, was killed in the crash.

'Dirty Pool' Charge in Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan New Democratic Party, which rode to power in a landslide victory in June, hopes to deliver the coup de grace to the Liberals in two byelections today.

At stake are Morse constituency, held by former Liberal premier Ross Thatcher until his death July 23, and Souris-Estevan, left vacant Oct. 17 by the death of the NDP's Russ Brown.

Victories would be mere frosting on the cake for the New Democrats, who have 44 of 60 seats in the legislature.

It's not that simple for the Liberals, who ruled the province from 1963 until June and who now have only 14 seats. Observers say they must win to remain a strong political force.

The Liberals have been screaming "dirty pool" since Premier Allan Blakeney called the byelections Nov. 2.

Acting Liberal Leader D. G. Stewart says his party suffered overwhelming defeat at the polls, then the loss of their leader and haven't had a chance to reorganize.

The Liberals meet to choose a new leader in Saskatoon next week and Mr. Stewart wanted the byelections postponed. The New Democrats refused.

FARMERS RUNNING

In Morse, located in south-central Saskatchewan, three candidates are bidding to replace Mr. Thatcher. All are farmers.

The Progressive Conservatives, a party unable to muster much enthusiasm in Saskatchewan, have sent in Leader Ed Nassen, 52, of Saskatoon. Jack Wiebe, 35, of Herbert is representing the Liberals and Jim Murdoch, 33, of Central Butte, the NDP.

In the southeastern constituency of Souris-Estevan, also primarily rural, there's a two-way race between the NDP's Kim Thorson, 39, and the Liberals' Ian MacDougall, 43.

Mr. Thorson is an Estevan lawyer and Mr. MacDougall is a pipeline executive, also from Estevan.

Mr. MacDougall held the seat until he was defeated in June by Mr. Brown, a former cabinet minister who was making a political comeback.

In the June 23rd election, Mr. Thatcher was elected with 3,478 votes to 2,765 for Norman Beach, the NDP candidate.

In Souris-Estevan, Mr. Brown received 5,022 votes compared with 4,734 for Mr. MacDougall.

Mr. Stewart criticized the New Democrats for calling the byelection when Mr. Brown had been buried only 10 days before.

The polls open today at 9 a.m. CST (10 p.m. EST) and close at 7 p.m. CST.

Agriculture Minister Jack

Messer said during the campaign that the NDP could stand on its record of the last five months.

"We were given a mandate to carry out a comprehensive agricultural program and we have advanced farther in five months than the Liberals managed in seven years," he told a public rally.

He accused the Liberal candidates of avoiding the main issues but he asked by Mr. Stewart how the NDP would increase employment when it was chasing investors out of the province.

Mr. Stewart was referring to cancellation of a proposed iron mine in northeastern Saskatchewan and a proposed pulp mill in the northwest.

Less than a month after the general election, Mr. Blakeney said the iron mine wouldn't go ahead because it was a "bad deal" financially for the province. A similar explanation was given when a contract for the $177-million pulp mill was cancelled.

Mr. Stewart also criticized the NDP for bringing federal farm policies into the fray.

After five months in office, Mr. Blakeney should "have the guts to fight the byelections on his own policies, not those of the federal government," he said.

There are more than 11,700 registered voters in Souris-Estevan and more than 7,300 in Morse.

BARBER SCHOOL DIES FROM LONG HAIR FAD

WINNIPEG (CP) — After 50 years in business, the Moler Barber School plans to close at the end of the year.

The manager of the school said enrolment has been falling "since long hair came into the picture."

Seven years ago, the school had three locations in Winnipeg, turning out 60 barbers every eight months.

Now it has only three students and a small shop on Portage Avenue. One of its two instructors left Monday.

The manager, A. E. Bonney, said, "There's no money in barbering," a trade he entered as a youth.

Now he plans to retire.

The president of the Manitoba Master Barber Association, John McLelland, said the Moler school is the city's only private barber school.

People may learn barbering at a community college and a publicly-run school in Winnipeg or at a community college in Brandon.

McLelland said, "Times are tough everywhere, not just in barbering. But most of the barbers are moving with the times and there are new shops opening too."

"Most of the men going out of business are close to retirement age anyway."

Alberta Resists Bilingual 'Force'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government doesn't want bilingual districts forced on it by federal law, Don Getty, minister of federal and inter-governmental affairs, said this week.

"We don't like the idea of legislation," Getty said following a three-hour, closed-door meeting with Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier. "We would like to see such districts established by local custom."

A 10-member advisory board appointed under the official Languages Act recently recommended that three Alberta districts — Falher-Groulxville-Peace River, Legal-Morinville-St. Albert and St. Paul-Bonnyville-Lac La Biche — be proclaimed bilingual areas.

Pelletier told a news conference that no decision has been made by the federal government on whether to proclaim the three districts.

In any case, he said, the only obligation to provide bilingual services would be on the federal government.

"We don't want to charge ahead," Pelletier said.

Session Date Set

EDMONTON (CP) — The first session of the 17th Alberta legislature will open March 2 with a date for fall session to be announced later, Premier Peter Lougheed announced Tuesday.

Lougheed, whose Progressive Conservatives ousted the Social Credit government Aug. 30 after they had been in power for 36 years, said his cabinet had approved the opening date.

Presidency Bid

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgarian says he will bid for the presidency of the national Progressive Conservative Association at the party's annual convention in Ottawa Sunday through Tuesday.

Roy Deyell, the party's national treasurer, said Tuesday

he would seek the position because Western Canada has strongly supported the PCs in the past 15 years.

ILLNESS STRIKES 40 AFTER EATING

EDMONTON (CP) — About 40 students at a University of Alberta residence became ill Tuesday and food poisoning was suspected as the cause.

Dr. M. J. Ball, director of student health services, said food poisoning had not been confirmed and cases of a similar illness, caused by a virus, had been reported in the city.

All the students affected had eaten either lunch, dinner or both at the residence, but preliminary examination of dietary records did not turn up a common denominator.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 20-year-old man, described by Judge William Ostler as "hard up," was sentenced to four months definite and 12 months indeterminate in prison for attempted armed robbery.

Ostler told Hardy N. Mills, address unknown, that he didn't think he was an "essentially bad person" and he realized that he was short of money.

The judge added, however, that shopkeepers are vulnerable and must be protected.

Mills earlier pleaded guilty to demanding money from the proprietor of Kay's Confectionery, 1044 Pandora, Nov. 20 when armed with a sheath knife.

The accused fled the store empty handed after a brief scuffle with 55-year-old Edward Kay and was apprehended by police at Quadra and Pandora a short time later.

Ostler said he was giving the accused a minimal definite jail term.

Victor D. Titian, 18, of Wellington, V.I., was given a suspended sentence and put on probation for two years for counts of theft, attempted theft, "breaking, entering and theft."

Titian earlier pleaded guilty to breaking into the office of a car lot at 597 Hillside about 4 a.m. Nov. 13 and stealing some car keys.

He took a car from the lot and drove it around before abandoning it on the street.

Court was told that Titian kept the car keys and returned to school in Nanaimo for a week.

He was apprehended by police Nov. 20 in the front seat of the car he had taken from the lot the week before.

The car keys were found in his socks.

Albert Wright, 68, of 1782 Lee, was fined $50 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Gordon David Deacon, 850 Seymour, was fined $350 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for four months except when working.

Henry Stevens, 48, of 1866 Allenby, was fined $350 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for four months except when working.

Kidnappers Free Rector

MEXICO CITY (Reuter)

The rector of the University of Guerrero, kidnapped 12 days ago by a leftist guerrilla movement which demanded the release of nine political prisoners in return for his freedom, was released today.

The rector, Jaime Castrejon Diaz, 40, who also is a leading politician as well as one of the richest men in the state of Guerrero, arrived at his house in Taxco.

The Castrejon family paid a ransom of $200,000 to the kidnappers during the weekend while the government flew the nine political prisoners to Cuba.

AT 84 DORA STILL PACKS 'EM IN

TORONTO (CP)—An invited audience of 500 jammed the St. Lawrence Centre Town Hall here Tuesday night to pay tribute to Dora Mavor Moore, the great lady of Ontario theatre.

There were words of praise for her many years of devotion to the advancement of Canadian theatre and sketches—and songs—from Spring Thaw (the satirical review) of former years.

Pierre Berton, acting as master of ceremonies, presented the 84-year-old theatre pioneer with a painting from the Stratford Shakespearean Festival and a cheque for $2,000 to start a theatre fund in her name.

And York University is establishing a Dora Mavor Moore award for the most promising performer in the first year of a theatre course.

Born in Glasgow, she came to Toronto with her father, James Mavor, who founded the department of political economy at the University of Toronto.

She studied at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and acted in Canada, New York and London until, at the end of the First World War, she returned to Canada to teach drama.

By 1933, she formed her own company, The Village Players, which toured Ontario schools—presenting Shakespeare to young audiences.

In 1946, she began the New Play Society, designed to "establish a living theatre in Canada on a professional basis; to furnish a training ground for Toronto actors and provide work for those with professional training."

She also found time to help found the Stratford Festival and has kept a close eye on Stratford ever since. She recently accused the town of dissolving Tuesday.

Stratford of succumbing to commercialism.

This year marked the 25th anniversary of Mrs. Moore's New Play Society and its legal charter was officially dissolved Tuesday.

Planning Key Issue

Victoria mayoralty candidates appeared together for the first time Tuesday, pinpointing city planning as the key issue.

Waterfront development and urban renewal was the main topic of seven-minute talks by Mayor Courtney Haddock, Ald. Peter Pollen, and Ald. Foster Isherwood, but Bill Scott said his "master plan" is to tax businesses more heavily in order to solve all planning problems.

Haddock said he thinks his first term of office is justified by the winning of $750,000 in urban renewal money from the provincial and federal governments.

NEXT PROBLEM

Haddock said the next problem he has to solve is moving the Blackball ferry terminal away from its present location next to the causeway.

Pollen said the city "just isn't being planned properly or led properly."

"As an example he said the Ocean Cement factory site, on the verge of being purchased

Victoria Times

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1, 1971. 49

by the city for relocation, may have to be bought out in five or 10 years because of bad planning.

Pollen said the work of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission must be redefined and added that a downtown businessmen's advisory board on planning matters should be formed.

He said the Reid Centre is "no salvation" to the city's downtown needs. What is needed is to get people downtown.

"DISGRACE"

Isherwood said the VMD waterfront property at the entrance to the Inner Harbor is a "disgrace" and could properly house a convention centre.

Isherwood said he does not believe in "fencing off" any part of the waterfront for any reason of giving special concessions to any developer.

He said the city doesn't need to "rush" to accommodate developer J. A. Reid.

"He's going to pay a handsome price but that's his game."

Isherwood said he thinks it is possible to prepare a cohesive plan for the entire city.

BUSINESS SOURCE

Scott said the "undeniable source of funds" in the city is in "equitable business license fees."

With added revenue extracted from the "rich and powerful elite" which normally "smuggles" the money out of the city, Victoria could become "the veritable Vienna of Canada — where the world's best foods, wine and beautiful women can be enjoyed and appreciated in a cultural atmosphere of splendid music, beautiful buildings, unsurpassed parks and landscapes, and equipped with one of the most artistic, cultural convention centres catering to Canada's varied ethnic groups in a place where they feel they belong."

NEW BOOKMOBILE for the Greater Victoria area went into service Monday, staffed by W. H. Stafford, Elizabeth Turk and Terry Smith. It has an increased book capacity and is also equipped to handle large books, paperbacks and large-print volumes. Modern photo-electric equipment will speed up checking process and increase personal service.

Mayor Elford Outlines Plans

Re-elected by acclamation, Oak Bay's Mayor Frances Elford said Tuesday, she's "happy that the electorate is evidently satisfied with my performance."

She outlines what she sees as major objectives in the next two years.

- A major recreation centre, made possible through the sale of the municipally-owned Victoria Riding Academy site, either through the current developer-architect competition or through some other development.

- The upgrading of regulations and requirements of areas now zoned for retail and three-storey frame construction.

- Some redevelopment in the block bounded by Windsor, Goodwin, Currie and Newport and the Milton, Chaucer and Byron area, using section 702A of the Municipal Act which permits control over construction by designating development areas.

- Redevelopment in Oak Bay to use as guidelines the cost-benefit study on multiple-dwelling now being completed by Fred Zech, town planning student at the University of British Columbia.

- A decision by the Capital Regional Board on whether McMillan and Clover Point outfalls be eliminated and combined in an outfall that will extend out past Trial Island, with a treatment centre on Trial, or that both outfalls be redirected to Macaulay Point, with extra land being bought at Macaulay should a treatment centre be found necessary.

The mayor favors the latter plan but says the three engineering firms now preparing studies should have their recommendations ready by May.

Rough Seas Sink 3

HONG KONG (AP) — Three ships sank and four fishing vessels capsized in heavy weather in the South China Sea, authorities reported Tuesday. Thirty-nine crew members have been rescued, 32 have been sighted and 29 are unaccounted for.

The Hong Kong marine department said the Panamanian registered cargo ship Great Ocean sank today about 118 miles south of Hong Kong and that of its 23 crew members, nine had been rescued and 13 had been sighted in a lifeboat, a life raft and on logs.

It reported that an officer aboard the Norwegian ship Bergesfister, which rescued the nine men, said the Great Ocean sank in mountainous seas whipped by 70-mile-an-hour winds.

TIME FOR DECISION

SECRECY AT CITY HALL

By Peter Pollen

I have never been able to understand why so much city planning is done in secret.

Why is the public the last to be told in a planning decision of any magnitude? By the time the voters are aware of what is happening, a concept is very often in its final stages.

It is planning by surprise.

Surely public participation is an integral part of any city plan. Without it there is no public awareness and support and without these planning is nothing.

It is true that in certain stages of the evolution of a plan, some details must be kept under cover in order to prevent unscrupulous operators from making a killing by the use of inside information.

But, in the broad sense, people should be told just what is happening. Regular reports should be made available. Secrecy at City Hall should be shunned.

And, for that reason, there should be a wider knowledge of the deliberations of city council's advisory planning commission.

Through the hands of this body, composed mainly of men from real-estate, banking, financing and architectural fields, passes much of the day-to-day business of planning and from it emerge many of the planning recommendations which vitally affect the city — most of which are rubber-stamped by council.

The meetings of this body are completely closed to the public and to aldermen not on the commission. And the minutes are secret!

I believe we should follow the example of Oak Bay and have all development or zoning applications first come before city council. Then, upon council's direction, they should be processed through the planning department for a complete review with recommendations back to council. Council could then, if desired, refer proposals to a standing committee on planning, a committee much more representative of council and the public.

Professionalism and expertise are to be treasured at City Hall but planners, like all civic administrators, elected or otherwise, should never forget that they are servants of the public.

Kindness Can Kill ... Are You Guilty of This?

The processes of plant growth must be broken down to simple terms from their scientific terminology to become understandable to happy backyard gardeners.

Not all have the orderly mind to store scientific facts in labelled pigeonholes to be drawn on when needed, yet we are capable of relating what we see to what we read or hear, reaching a practical conclusion which can be applied to their situations as we meet them.

Thus when gardeners read a book on "plant hunting" (the search for plants in their native environment), they notice how frequently the writer describes as "a sheet of color" the plant or plants growing on a mountain meadow or on a forest floor.

If the plant is a primula, a woodland orchid or an alpine rhododendron familiar to us we shall critically think as we read "it doesn't flower like that for me!"

Stop for two moments to consider the difference in soil, exposure to sun, wind and frost and possibly the nearness of other plants, in the native growing place and in your garden.

You may have a solitary speedwell. We have all seen young seedling plants growing happily in a colony yet one plant removed falls to thrive.

Here may be a case of the value of colonization, where each individual provides a mite of assistance to the community.

Also, we must stop long enough to remember that the purpose of plants growing in nature is to reproduce their kind in order to perpetuate the species.

But to get back to our poorly flowering garden plant.

For if we provide what we believe to be ideal soil, the ideal situation, and then we give it what we think it needs as the extra refinements of civilization — ample watering and fertilizer.

In short, we think we are raising its standard of living, whereas we are really providing luxuries unnecessary to its existence as a plant, and which will be the cause of its extinction if we persist in an overabundance.

A precarious existence encourages prolific seed production since the life span of the plant may be limited or suddenly terminated. The seed may not be of highest quality, but by the law of averages, some seed is likely to germinate.

Given a life of luxury, the plant responds with vigorous growth and masses of foliage, and no tendency to make flowers (and seeds) since its existence is not threatened.

As gardeners, are we guilty of killing some of our more "difficult" plants with kindness?

SOLUTION THURSDAY

SAINT NICK PASSES OUT

VINKEVEEN, Holland (UPI) — Saint Nicholas, the Dutch Santa Claus had to be lifted out of the saddle and given first aid by his assistants when he made his annual triumphal horseback entry into the village.

He was overcome by the ether with which his artificial white beard and mustache had been cleaned before he pasted them on.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the Life Masters Pairs Championship event which took place during the 1971 Summer National Championships, Mike Lawrence, of Los Angeles, came up with a deceptive defensive book play that talked declarer into adopting a losing line of play. Here is the deal: with Lawrence sitting in the East seat, both sides vulnerable. West deals.

10 7 4
Q 10 8 3
A 10 3

EAST
K 10 8 5
Q J 9 6 3
K J 5

SOUTH
Q 9 7 6 3
A 10 8
Q 9 3
K Q J

The bidding:
West North East South
Pass Pass 1 1
Pass 3 4 Pass 4 4
Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Five of 7.

A low heart was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East's nine was taken by South's queen. Declarer's prospects were not too rosy, since he had three certain losers in the red suits, and his trump holding was not too robust.

However, there was little he could do about his position. At trick two he led a low spade, hoping that West had been dealt the doubleton K-x. If this set-up existed, then the jack would win the trick via a finesse, and the ace would then fell West's king.

But when dummy's jack of spades was put up at trick two, Lawrence followed suit with the eight-spot. Declarer now charged horses in mid-stream, for if the eight were an honest play, then East had been dealt either the singleton eight (in which case declarer was doomed to defeat, for West would then have been dealt the K-10-5-4) or the eight was part of an original holding of the doubleton 10-8.

Declarer, hoping that East had started with the doubleton 10-8, now returned to the South hand via the club king. He then laid down the queen of spades, to finesse against West's presumed king, and to catch East's ten in the process. Had West been dealt the tripleton K-5-4 and East the doubleton 10-8, declarer would thus have avoided the loss of a trump trick.

But, as can be observed, West failed to follow suit, and declarer now had to lose two trump tricks to East's king and ten. Thus he incurred a two-trick set, thereby giving East-West a "top-on-the-board."

Had Lawrence captured dummy's jack of trumps on the initial trump lead, declarer would have lost only one trump trick for when the trump ace would be led later on, West would fail to follow suit. Lawrence's remaining 10-8 of trumps would now be trapped by South's Q-9.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Charlie was checking his money. "Here's something funny," he said. "I've got eleven dollars less in bills than I had when I went out this morning, but eleven more cents in coins."

"So what?" Molly smiled. "You spent the difference." "Sure. In fact I spent exactly half what I had," replied Charlie. "But it's still odd."

How much did he spend? (Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: GREG was 1751.

New Cement Opens Up Bone Repair

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The U.S. government's recent release of a new surgical cement has opened up "a completely new milestone chapter" in reconstructive bone surgery in the United States.

beginning with improved total artificial hip replacements that could benefit at least one million Americans.

The "Methacrylate" cement also may lead to artificial shoulder and knee replacements.

This was reported Monday to the American Medical Association by Dr. Roderick Turner of Massachusetts General Hospital who expanded on the report at a news conference.

He said the newly-approved plastic cement now makes it possible for orthopedic surgeons to perform a kind of "cement hip-socket" operation originally pioneered and widely used in Britain with startling success.

'Big Splash Is Needed To Meet Pool Salaries'

Every effort should be made to encourage maximum public use of the swimming pool at the new Gordon Head Recreation Centre because salaries for pool staff are "way over" the budgeted figure, Ald. Frank Waring said Tuesday night.

The comment came during a general discussion of the pool at a meeting of Saanich indoor recreation committee.

Indoor recreation manager Bill Young had said in a report that public use of the pool has "dropped off somewhat," and Sunday night sessions have been discontinued because average attendance during October was only 45.

Commenting that he has received three complaints about the closure, Ald. William Noel said the people concerned obviously felt the pool should be open for swimming on Sunday nights.

He suggested encouraging more swimmers by offering "some sort of bonus deal," such as free admission for women. Noel said this type of promotion tends to increase attendance, as hockey experience has proved.

"Two for one," remarked Mayor Hugh Curtis.

Here Waring referred to pool staff salaries, claiming they are "double what we thought they would be."

Curtis noted, however, that revenue on the pool in its first year is also much higher than the budget estimate.

"The operating deficit of about $20,000 on that building is not very significant," he added.

Young said the reason for the miscalculation in salaries was increased public demand for swimming classes offered at the pool.

The courses had trebled, he said, requiring many more instructors.

The committee decided to recommend that Noel's proposed "two for one" ticket offer on Sunday nights be operated on a trial basis for three months starting Jan. 1.

Also in his report, Young said the Gordon Head pool will be shut from Dec. 20 to 26, for repairs and a thorough check of the installation.

Reviewing the various activities taking place in the centre's auditorium, Young said an approach has been made to the Silver Threads organization with a view to establishing a drop-in centre for retired people in the area.

Among other activities planned was one to attract teenagers.

Young said the auditorium and club room were "not used extensively" during the first few months of operation. But this situation was changing and with the new activities planned "we should be coming closer to the full potential of this building," he said.

Referring to this aspect of the report, Curtis told the committee that he, committee chairman Leslie Passmore and council officials had met Tuesday with the executive of the Gordon Head Mutual Improvement Society to discuss use of the centre's facilities.

He described it as a "positive and useful" meeting.

Two Fishermen Missing On Net-Setting Trip

LANGLEY (CP) — Two fishermen were missing and presumed drowned Tuesday after they failed to return from setting nets at the east of McMillan Island in the Fraser River.

RCMP said John Anthony Gabriel, 27, and David Fillardau, 24, went out to set their nets Monday afternoon. They failed to return and their boat was located in the tidal flats, full of water.

Lack of Information

LADNER (CP) — The British Columbia school system is plagued by a lack of information and overly centralized control, Delta parent Mildred Kjar said Tuesday night.

She told a commission on the role of the public in education that parents are not given a sufficient share in school program planning and are often left in doubt about the goals of the school system.

Name on Ballot

LADNER (CP) — Ladner businessman Ed Magee is back in Delta's mayoralty race after challenging a ruling that he was ineligible to stand as a candidate for public office.

Magee was informed last week that he could not run for office because he was involved in expropriation proceedings with the municipality over property he owns in Ladner.

The municipal affairs department advised Delta that neither a returning officer nor a solicitor had the right to disqualify anyone from running for office.

UBC in Black

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia Tuesday reported total income for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1971 of $90,867,082, with $52,279,870 coming from provincial grants for operating and capital expenses.

Total expenditure was $85,988,410, with the largest portion being $50 million for salaries and expenses for administrative and academic staff.

BBB Staff Shortage

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vince Forbes, manager of the city's Better Business Bureau, said Tuesday the bureau ended its fiscal year with a $2,184 deficit. He said current staff members are overloaded with work but the bureau can't afford to hire more people. The bureau copes with an average of more than 60 calls of inquiry a day.

Still Want Money

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council decided Tuesday to approach Premier Bennett and federal Manpower Minister Otto Lang in an attempt to salvage a portion of Ottawa's $160 million winter works loan program. Applications for funds were handled on a first-come, first-served basis and the applications of both Vancouver and Victoria were too late.

Blood Clinic Tops Goal

Red Cross blood clinics at the Union Centre Monday and HMC Dockyard Tuesday produced a total of 432 donors; $2 more than the objective, a Red Cross spokesman said today.

A blood donor clinic will be held at the Canadian Legion Hall, Ganges on Salt Spring Island, next Monday from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Drug Scene Said Creating Slavery

The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — A British researcher says that Afghanistani peasants are living in what amounts to slavery, a condition whose cruelty is linked to the increasing Western-nation demand for illicit drugs.

Peter Willey, who in June published a report on slavery in Afghanistan on behalf of Britain's Anti-Slavery Society, said that drug production is controlled by landlords who are in effect slave-masters, and that the increasing demand for drugs, coupled with a drying-up of production in other countries, has increased tremendously the burden of the peasant farmers who grow the cannabis (marijuana and hashish) and opium-poppo crops. It is these peasant farmers who are in effect slaves.

In a recent address to the Anti-Slavery Society, Willey sought to give a detailed description of forced labor in Afghanistan and its connections with the narcotics business.

Willey described how domestic slaves in Afghanistan might, if they were in bond to a reasonable master, have an even better life than their fellows. Those who were owned by a cruel or intolerant man were subject to whippings, torture, sexual assault if they were women, castration if they were men, and death.

On the land, he said, the peasantry was in bondage to the landlords through the imposition of cumulative, hereditary debts. They worked for barely enough to live, and they and their families were subject to the whims of their landlords. Landlords stay on good terms with the provincial governors who wield absolute authority.

Willey, who said in his original report that the economy of Afghanistan would collapse if the illicit drug trade were damaged, asserted that the ban on the growing of poppies for opium in Turkey had greatly increased demand in Afghanistan and was a god-send to the authorities.

CARAVANS USED

The only problem was the smuggling, which was becoming highly organized, usually on horseback in caravans of up to 20. But the situation had increased the demands of landlords on their serfs.

Only landlords had the capital to mount the operations of growing and smuggling, but the peasantry received none of the profits.

"The situation," he said, "has led to even greater infringements of the already pitiful human rights of the peasantry. If the serfs were growing apricots or dried fruit, they might just get some extra reward. But the whole premises of the narcotics industry are different. The work is done in secret.

"What is happening in Afghanistan has a direct bearing on the problem of narcotics in Britain," says Willey. "If it is true that the consumption of heroin is past its peak and that consumption of cannabis is on the increase, Afghanistan is in a good position to supply the market."

No Yule Lighting Contest

There won't be any Victoria Jaycee Christmas Lighting Contest this year because of lack of public interest, Jaycee president Terry Daniels said today.

But Victorians don't lack Christmas spirit, he added.

He pointed out that the contest was originally designed to generate a festive mood in a city without a "white Christmas." It has been an annual event since 1929.

In 1959, 109 people entered the contest, Daniels said, but only 64 entered in 1961. However, there were 25 per cent more entries in 1970 than in 1969.

A press release said that the contest has achieved its aims. The Naval division of the contest will continue and a prize will be awarded to the business establishment with the best decoration.

Oak Bay Balks at School Ground Cost-Share Plan

Oak Bay council's parks and recreation committee Tuesday night objected to two proposals made by the Greater Victoria School Board in its cost-sharing program for use of school playing grounds.

Municipal engineer, planner Geoffrey White told the committee the board would not permit use of the changing room facilities if another group, other than the recre-tion commission, was using the gym.

Ald. Brian Smith said it was a matter of a janitor being employed.

Ald. John Goult asked, "What are the board's objections? Are we so modest that basketball people can't undress with soccer people?"

The committee asked White to renegotiate this point and also the length of notice to be given the commission if any of the fields are needed for school programs during the time normally set aside for community use.

The committee recommends a 10-day notice period, rather than the seven days laid down by the board.

Goult said, "We're paying a lot of money for this. There has to be some give and take."

The committee will recommend to council Monday that structural changes and alternative types of slides to be used in municipal parks be studied.

The action came after the committee received a letter from J. D. Herbert, 2668 Cavendish, in which he said his four-year-old daughter had fractured her skull, after falling from a slide in Willows Park.

Ald. Douglas Watts said it was also the duty of parents or some responsible adult to supervise small children playing in parks.

"No matter what we do we can't make everything 100 per cent safe," he said.

Acting on a report from White, the committee will also recommend that $3,200 be spent on providing sand and grass surfaces and modifying steps at playground areas in Willows, Windsor, Lafayette, Quimper, Carnarvon, Gyro and Firemens Parks.

In other business:

• The committee decided to recommend that architect David Hambleton be asked to prepare landscaping plans for the senior citizens' centre and branch library at a cost of $450.

• The traffic section voted to ask council to express concern to B.C. Hydro about their practice of indiscriminate lopping of trees while working on municipal streets. Smith said, "They just shouldn't go in and butcher trees with no regard to the trees or the environment."

• The works committee will recommend that an extra janitor be employed and the expense shared jointly by the public library and the municipality for the maintenance of the new library and senior citizens' centre.

• The committee will also recommend that $834 be spent out of the 1972 reserve fund for large cleaning equipment for the two new buildings and an additional $192 for smaller cleaning items.

• It was recommended that a resident janitor-care-taker be employed at Henderson Park.

• Drawings were approved for a regulation size lacrosse box at Carnarvon Park. White said bids would be opened by Mayor Frances Elford at noon Friday and would be listed in time for Monday's council meeting.

Snow On Way?

Brisk easterly winds are expected to whip the shores of Vancouver Island this evening, bringing a mixture of overcast skies and showers.

While there's no risk of snowshoes becoming the rig of the day in the near future, forecasts call for a possible mixture of snow with tonight's rain, particularly in areas like the Malahat.

But it won't last. Forecast for Thursday is for more of the same — clouds and rain with low temperatures tonight ranging in the 35 degree mark, rising to the mid-40s Thursday.

Hussein Militant

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan called on Arab states today to mobilize their armies for a showdown with Israel "because force is the only means that can resolve the Middle East conflict."

In a speech from the throne opening the Jordanian parliament, the 36-year-old monarch said that Israel "believes only in force, so force must be our way to peace."

The militant tone of the king's policy speech indicated he is moving closer to the thinking of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who said his country has decided to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict by armed combat rather than peace negotiations.

Heavy security precautions were evident inside and outside the parliament building.

The king's speech came three days after the assassination of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Telli in Cairo.

Hussein insisted on Israel's withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and again promised Palestinian Arabs in the Israeli-occupied West Bank they would have the right to decide their future only after these territories are liberated.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir hinted on arrival Tuesday night for talks with President Nixon that she might be ready to suggest some new path towards a Middle East peace.

Another possibility, she suggested, was renewal of the United Nations mediation effort by special envoy Gunnar Jarring — overshadowed by the U.S. drive on the canal question for the last nine months.

REFUNDS STUDIED

British Columbia's Liquor Industry is considering a depot system for refunding wine and liquor bottles, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said today.

Kiernan's statement came after he was asked whether B.C. would follow Alberta and require damage deposits on the containers as an anti-litter measure.

The minister said it is "preferable" that industry police itself and B.C.'s litter net requires other amendments before enlarging its scope to include wine and liquor containers.

He said he has not decided whether to bring these containers under the act should industry fail to create the depot system. Kiernan emphasized the liquor industry has not given him a "declared statement of policy" that the depots will be created.

CIVIL WAR in East Pakistan and continuing fighting between India and Pakistan has left millions homeless and starving. Babies and children are the most pitiful victims of this tragic strife and this year the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada is devoting the full resources of its Cup of Milk

Fund to Pakistani refugee relief. The fund campaign opened officially in Victoria Tuesday night when USC executive director Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova made a moving appeal for help at a public meeting. An account of the meeting and details on how Victorians can help is on Page 2.

Pakistan Army Admits India Force Winning

From AP-Reuters

The Pakistan army says its soldiers repulsed Indian attacks at two points on the East Pakistan border, inflicting heavy casualties on the Indians.

However, Pakistan radio Tuesday night admitted that Indian troops were making small gains in various areas of East Pakistan but "at great costs."

The radio said India was using tanks and bringing in troops on all fronts.

A Pakistan army spokesman in Dacca said Tuesday night the Pakistani troops repelled an Indian attack at Chaugacha, in the Jessore district on East Pakistan's western frontier, and thwarted an Indian attempt to capture Kamalpur, in the Mymensingh sector on the northwest front.

He said the Indians, having failed to capture Kamalpur, launched a fresh attack supported by tanks and artillery Monday night on two fronts.

The spokesman said the battlefield was covered with Indian dead and that the Indians tried to remove the bodies from East Pakistani territory under a covering artillery bombardment.

He also reported that Pakistani troops captured seven Indian soldiers and a quantity of arms and ammunition in Dinajpur, in East Pakistan's northern sector.

The Indian government says the fighting in East Pakistan is mainly between the Mukti Bahini, the East Pakistani independence fighters, and the West Pakistan army. New Delhi says Indian troops have crossed into East Pakistan only when attacked by the Pakistanis.

An All-India radio broadcast early today said the Mukti Bahini, in a series of fresh offensives, had liberated three areas in the Sylhet sector in the east and had launched an all-out attack on the strategic town of Feni in the Noakhali district.

The radio added that latest reports also said Faridpur, southwest of Dacca and home-town of the jailed Awami League leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, and the southern town of Barisal were completely under the control of the Bahini.

Liberals Will Cut Off Tax Change Debate

BULLETIN

OTTAWA (CP) — To Liberal cheers, the government today gave formal notice that it will impose closure to cut off debate on the tax change bill.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government pondered some big-stick moves Tuesday to speed progress of its tax bill as the measure continued to make only inchworm progress through the Commons.

One form of debate-limiting closure was reported to be a strong probability, with the government pushing to have the bill through the Commons and Senate before Jan. 1, to take immediate effect for the 1972 tax year.

In the House, much of the argument centred on a contemporary tax case, the Crown versus the late Stafford Smythe and Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens — and how the decision is made regarding court procedure for tax-avoidance cases.

The issue was the Crown option of prosecuting either by indictment or by summary conviction.

When the Crown selects indictment, conviction carries a mandatory prison sentence of between two months and five years. Summary conviction leaves the option of either a fine or a jail term to the judge.

Smythe and Ballard, holding the controlling interests in Maple Leaf Gardens, home of Toronto's National Hockey League team, challenged the government right to proceed by indictment after they were charged with tax evasion. The matter went to the Supreme Court of Canada, which upheld the government's right.

STILL BEFORE COURTS

The tax-evasion part of the case still is before the courts. But Conservative MPs argued Tuesday that the Crown option is unfair.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound—Muskoka) said it left the federal attorney-general with too powerful a tool that was too open to abuse.

"It is not likely to happen but the power is there,"

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said the system destroyed what should be an objective of the law — equal treatment for all.

Corporations convicted of tax evasion pay fines, said Mr. Bigg, a former RCMP officer.

But senior corporate executives seldom were held personally responsible for a variety of reasons.

The government couldn't put a whole corporation in jail and usually settled for a fine. But an individual was liable to loss of personal liberty and the system was unfair.

Before stalling on this aspect, the House approved a group of items in the big bill after the government agreed to ease opposition objections by changing some words.

But only about one-third of the bill's 332 items have been passed since full debate began in September.

BILL WAS PHONEY

By NEIL GADDES
Times Staff

Joseph D. Latondress felt he had an unwarranted telephone bill to pay for a phone he never used.

Early today he backed a tow truck up to the front doors of the B.C. Telephone building, 1321 Blanshard, connected the tow cable and drove off tearing the doors off.

"I do have a good excuse, I feel," the 20-year-old accused from Quesnel, told Judge William Ostler.

Latondress said two years ago he had requested the phone company to remove a phone from a home he was leaving in Port Alberni.

He said he left that address but several months later received a bill for $300. He said the people who moved into the house continued to use the phone under his name.

Ostler said the incident was the "most blatant, aggressive case of mischief" he had heard of awhile.

The judge gave the man a nominal one day in jail and fined him $400.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Liberal Larry Desjardins, the St. Boniface MIA who has had an in-and-out relationship with Manitoba's New Democratic Party government since it came to office in 1980, was appointed to the provincial cabinet today by Premier Ed Schreyer.

Freight Rolling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railway freight service began returning to normal on the main line today when a full shift of yardmen returned to their jobs. The return-to-work followed a Tuesday meeting at which more than 300 members of the United Transportation Union, Local 1747, were given legal advice to stop their protest against new contract provisions.

Over the next few days the Times will carry the views of local candidates in the Dec. 11 municipal elections.

U.S. Dollar Devaluation Possible

ROME (UPI) — The United States today considered devaluation of the once mighty and now seriously beleaguered American dollar as part of a new western monetary system.

Karl Schiller, the West German economic and finance minister, agreed with a questioner that U.S. readiness to discuss concrete figures, including the dollar, represented a breakthrough in monetary negotiations.

The U.S. conceded the possibility of dollar devaluation in negotiations with other members of the so-called Group of Ten, the world's wealthiest non-Communist countries, in return for significant financial and trade advantages.

West European officials said they were "reasonably optimistic" that a basis for monetary realignment was possible with final negotiations early next year.

NEW SYSTEM

"There is every sign that America is now prepared to see a framework for a new system which would include a change in the dollar's value, provided the conditions are right," a European Common Market participant said.

The framework, as discussed by finance ministers, involved devaluation of the U.S. dollar and upward revaluation of western European currencies, such as the franc and the mark, plus the Japanese yen.

"Does this represent a breakthrough?" a reporter shouted as Schiller appeared. "Yes, it could," Schiller replied.

OPTIMISTIC

A French spokesman sounded another optimistic note.

"We can say there has been certain progress," he said.

The "ten," the United States, Canada, Britain, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, Sweden and The Netherlands met with only finance and treasury ministers and central bankers conferring.

Conference sources said this indicated the talks were at a high and delicate political level. A fact supported by the decision of French Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing to leave the conference room to telephone Paris four times.

West European officials said the U.S. readiness to discuss devaluation, after years of refusal to even contemplate such a step, was a "vital" move towards a settlement of the monetary disorders which followed President Nixon's devalued-dollar moves in August.

SOLID FRONT

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, the Europeans said, was confronted with a solid front by the major U.S. trade partners that a realignment was impossible unless it involved a downward change in the dollar's value.

Conference sources said the six European Common Market members, plus Britain would like to see a dollar devaluation somewhere around the seven per cent mark.

SHARP SET TO HIT AUTO PACT BRAKES

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes External Affairs Minister Sharp as indicating Canada is prepared to suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-United States auto pact.

"It is believed the suspension might last two years," The Star says.

It quotes Sharp as saying in an interview that Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help the U.S. ease its economic problems so that Washington can abolish its 10 per cent extra duty on imports.

Sharp "indicated" the Canadian contributions would include "suspension of the safeguards, agreement to increase the duty-free allowance on goods bought by Canadian visitors to the U.S. — now $25 every three months — and agreement to purchase more arms from the U.S. under the defence sharing agreement."

Ferry Report Dismays Victims

Times Staff

An elderly Alberta couple who plunged in their car into the ocean from an unloading B.C. Ferry in Nanaimo expressed dismay Tuesday that a B.C. Ferries report attached no blame to the crew, or to mechanical failure.

Mrs. William Martin, 75, of Fort Macleod, said she and her husband, who is 82, were driving off the Queen of New Westminster ferry ramp Oct. 20 when the ferry suddenly moved out. "Now whose fault is that, I ask you?"

She added that neither she nor her husband were ever contacted by B.C. Ferries in its investigation of the incident.

FULL REPORT

In a letter to Highways Minister Wesley Black, B.C. Ferries general manager, Monty Aldous said no mechanical failure of the ferry's hydraulic system had been found nor anything to indicate human error.

Aldous could not be reached to find out who carried out the investigation or if the

B.C. Trade Deputy Reported in Ottawa

Robert Renwick is no longer deputy minister of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce for British Columbia, the Times learned today.

Renwick, 54, left B.C. two weeks ago for Ottawa for an undisclosed job in the federal civil service, a source close to the former deputy minister said.

The source said Renwick was "just let out of his job" at the end of October. Renwick's house at 3542 Redwood is for sale and his phone is out of service.

Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skilling was not available for comment today. His secretary said Skilling would not be making an announcement about Renwick's departure or his replacement for some time yet.

A former federal trade official, Renwick left for Ottawa by car and was not expected to have arrived there yet. Directory assistance in Ottawa does not show a new listing for a Robert Renwick.

There have been rumors that Renwick's replacement will come from outside the department — possibly a former pulp mill executive. Renwick became deputy minister in 1967 when Health Minister Ralph Lofmark held Skilling's portfolio. Skilling succeeded Lofmark in the portfolio three years ago.

Affluence, Drugs Go Hand-in-Hand: Report

TORONTO (CP) — A survey on drug use among high school students in North Bay, Ont., reveals that children from better-off homes are more prone to taking certain drugs.

The survey, conducted by Dianne Fejer of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation, also found that students who don't use alcohol or marijuana tend to have better scholastic records than those who do.

The survey, conducted last May, was released today. All 3,147 students in Grades 9, 11 and 13 in North Bay's six high schools were asked to take part. About 82 per cent, or 2,576 students, answered.

The survey took into account the use of 12 drugs ranging from alcohol, tobacco and marijuana to barbiturates, glue and other solvents.

Alcohol and tobacco were most commonly used with 70.9 per cent of the students having taken alcohol within the previous six months and 47.7 per cent having taken tobacco.

Marijuana was used by 21.2 per cent of the students; LSD by 10.5 per cent; barbiturates by 8.2 per cent; other hallucinogens by 6.5 per cent; tranquilizers by 7.0 per cent; amphetamines by 4.5 per cent; opiates and solvents by 3.5 per cent; and glue by 1.8 per cent.

The survey also found that males tend to use more alcohol, marijuana, tobacco, LSD and other hallucinogens than females. Females use more tranquilizers

Students who had used alcohol and marijuana in the previous six months, the survey found, more often had fathers who were professionals and managers than students who had not used drugs.

For example, the survey stated, about 27 per cent of alcohol users had professionals or managers for fathers compared with 22.5 per cent of non-users.

Alcohol and marijuana use were closely related, the survey found, stating that almost all marijuana users had taken alcohol in the previous six months.

The survey added it appears that marijuana isn't a substitute for alcohol and that marijuana users are also more often drinkers.

A Christmas for Mom —And How to Avoid It

Our resident standard-bearer of Women's Lib — and no office is complete these days without one — has commanded me to write a few words about what a perfectly rotten time Christmas is for the captive housewives of the land. Rather than get beaten up, I am going to do it.

The dear girl is acting as if she had just discovered one of The Basic Facts of Life, but, of course, any male chauvinistic pig who has been married for more than a few minutes will know that it is but the simple truth.

Of all the holidays it is the one that may come closest to breaking Milady's spirit, her mind and her back.

For some two weeks of the time the children are at home from school in weather ideally suited for the tracking in of mud, sometimes snow and occasionally blizzards.

There is an enormous amount of shopping to be done in bitter, hand-to-hand combat with her kind and with a dwindling selection on the counters.

Depending upon her whim or her vim she's in an agony of preparation from the second week in December and may be still mopping up as late as mid-January. The great day itself, and those immediately fore and aft, are a cruel test of her stamina and her will to live. At the very climax of the celebration she is called upon to prepare the most ambitious and exhausting meal of the year in a house that, chances are, has gone just a little mad.

While all this is going on she must look her best for the numerous relatives and other jolly transients who will feel free to invade her privacy at any hour, unannounced, usually at a moment of utter chaos.

Her children will be as badly behaved as they can conceivably be and this applies, more often than not, to her husband who, in the crucible of her ordeal, will quite possibly overdo the testing of the run punch and be no good for anything.

These are precisely the points made by my Women's Lib chum (I think "chum" had better be the word) but what she forgets or has not learned is that this knowledge rests weightily on the conscience of every husband who has the tiniest spark of decency in him.

Though it took place a number of years ago I have offered my own true life story to show that we are not all totally insensitive — and also to demonstrate, perhaps, that there's really not much that we can do about it.

On that occasion I put the plan first to the children. Your mother, I said, has a rough time of it making our Christmas a merry one year after year. Let us this year, I said, have a special Christmas just for her. I explained my scheme in detail. Loyal little tykes that they were, they capitulated with hardly a whimper.

I then broke the glad tidings to my wife. "No Christmas worries for you this year, my sweet," I said, oozing sincerity. "The kids and I have decided that we'll get a couple of adjoining rooms at The Empress. One for them, one for us. It won't be any more expensive than having it at home, maybe less. You'll have no house work. Just press the magic little button for room service and there you are. We'll have our Christmas turkey in the great dining room. No fuss, no muss, no dirty dishes.

"This year," I plunged on, "there'll be no influx of visitors on Boxing Day. This year we'll visit them and when we get back to the hotel all the beds will be made by the little Christmas elves. This will be your Christmas and it will be the best ever."

Now, did my wife leap up and down with joy? Did she fling herself into my arms with cries of heartfelt gratitude? Did she run to phone up less fortunate wives to boast of the great humanitarianism she had married? She did not. She just looked a little bewildered and declared, "It wouldn't be right."

I did not accept this as an outright refusal until about a week later when it came to my attention that she's ordered the turkey.

"You are not accepting our offer?" I asked. "It wouldn't be much of a Christmas in a hotel room, would it?" she replied. "Not much of a Christmas at all."

"Well, if that's the way you wish it," I said and there the matter ended until that evening when my oldest daughter confronted me rather crossly.

"You should have known that Mummy wouldn't want any other kind of Christmas but the kind we always have," said she.

"Perhaps you're right," said I.

"Honestly, Daddy," said she, "you don't know much about women, do you?"

"I guess not," I said and I fought back my inscrutable Mona Lisa smile.

Urgent Surgery Only If Fast Pace Keeps Up

If the surge of urgent cases for surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital continues, the day is coming when there won't be room for anything else, executive director Emert Van Tilburg said today.

The hospital has been swamped with urgent cases recently and will have to consider rearrangement of operating room priorities early next year, he added.

There are nine operating rooms at St. Joseph's but only six or seven are in full use weekdays because of a bed shortage for patients, before and after surgery.

About half operating room time is devoted to urgent and emergency cases. The time left for elective surgery may have to be cut back by about a third in January or February, said Van Tilburg.

One operating-room team works on urgent cases Saturdays and there is an OR team on standby over weekends for emergencies.

"If this trend goes on, there will be no elective operations at all, just urgent and emergency cases," said Van Tilburg.

"I don't know what's going to happen. I'm very concerned what's going to develop over the next two, three or four years."

It takes about five years from planning to completion of new hospital beds and detailed planning of additions to St. Joseph's has not begun.

Introduction of a doctors' review system 18 months ago to speed patient discharges and free more beds enabled the hospital to cut its surgery waiting list to 800. But the increasing load has pushed it back up to 1,300.

Patients are now being booked for elective (essential but not urgent) surgery next July and August, he said.

Elective surgery is preventative medicine and a vital part of health care. The statistics "demonstrate that once again we are losing ground."

Van Tilburg said that opening of the hospital's new day care surgery around March will help a little on hospital beds but create some problems of its own.

The day care surgery will handle about 15 minor operations a day where the patient does not need to remain in hospital overnight. It will be housed in a one-story addition under construction alongside the emergency department.

The new space will free some room in the hospital where five or six cases a day are now being handled. But it will siphon off the easy operating room cases, leaving time to be filled by more complex surgery requiring more intensive nursing.

Van Tilburg said the last thing the hospital likes to do is cancel elective surgery, where patients have been waiting for months for their operations.

But the load of urgent cases meant cancelling elective schedules three times last month. About nine or 10 cases were involved.

Teachers' Jobs First Casualties In Budget Cut

Some Greater Victoria teachers will have to be discharged early in 1972 because the district does not have enough money to work with, school board chairman Allen McKinnon said today.

The board is faced with the task of cutting at least $750,000 from its 1972 budget after the provincial department of education provided the district with only a 5.6 per cent increase over last year's budget.

The amount the district is allowed to spend without going to the voters for approval was announced by the department today. All districts in B.C. will be allowed to spend $15,190 per instructional unit.

An instructional unit comprises 20 secondary or 30 elementary students.

This amount is multiplied by the number of instructional units in the district (1,271 in Victoria) to determine the basic education program.

For the Victoria district, when extras like special classes and transportation are figured in, the amount for the basic education program is $20,572,344.

The government allows the district to add eight per cent to this amount, giving the district a total of $22,218,132 to spend without needing voter approval.

McKinnon said the increase in this amount over last year's allowed spending is only 5.6 per cent, nowhere near the usual eight or nine per cent increase districts have traditionally been granted.

He said the department has put the Victoria board "in a very unenviable position" since at least $750,000 will have to be chopped from a budget trustees already considered "bare bones."

That $750,000 figure is quite likely to get substantially higher, he said, since it allows for a teacher salary increase of 6.5 per cent, according to voters in an appeal for more operating funds would be "an exercise in futility" since the recent trend has been toward defeat of money referendums.

The only avenue left to the board, he said, would be to discharge teachers. This could be done as early as Jan. 1 since the arbitration results are issued Dec. 31. Teachers would be dismissed according to their order of seniority with the school district.

McKinnon said: "I can't see any other way but to dismiss teachers. That's what we'll have to do."

How many teachers will have to be cut will not be known until arbitration has determined how much of an increase teachers will receive.

He said the board would prefer not to cut out some of the special classes featured in the district.

McKinnon said he finds it "unusual" that the government can use what amounts to retroactive legislation to curtail spending by school districts.

Brothers has said he intends to introduce legislation in the 1972 session which would limit allowable spending to 108 per cent of the basic education program instead of the former 110 per cent. Although the provincial legislature does not sit until January, the limit is already being effectively used, McKinnon said, since it is the minister who decides the basic education program for each school district.

The school budgets are approved in final form by the department April 20, giving ample time for the necessary legislation to pass through the house.

Department Policies Slammed By McKinnon

the limit set by Education Minister Donald Brothers.

If teachers are granted an increase in salary of more than 6.5 per cent (their dispute with the board has gone to binding arbitration) the additional costs involved will be added to the $750,000 the board must delete from its budget.

For every percentage point over 6.5, about $160,000 will be added to the $750,000, McKinnon said.

"It's looking as big as a mountain right now," he said.

Even if the district does not replace teachers who leave for various reasons (retirement, death, change in domicile) only about $250,000 can be cut from the $750,000 total, he said.

Safety Measures Defended Following Near-Drowning

Safety precautions at the new Crystal Pool in Central Park were well within B.C. government regulations when a near-drowning occurred Tuesday, pool manager Bill Young said today.

Ena Chow, 9, is in critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital following the accident.

The girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yau Hon Chow, 974 North Park, was pulled from the pool about 1:35 p.m. by lifeguard Mike Vavra, 5907 Oldfield, one of five guards on duty at the time.

Police said after Vavra took the girl from the water, all five lifeguards applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in turn. Several lifeguards accompanied the child to hospital, continuing resuscitation in a police car.

Ena was among a group of George Jay elementary school students at the pool, which was in its third full day of operation Tuesday.

The girl was spotted by Vavra in four feet of water near the north end of the T-shaped pool, which has a maximum capacity of 800 swimmers. There were about 400 youngsters in the pool at the time.

Young said B.C. health department regulations require one lifeguard for every 100 swimmers.

"Every possible precaution has been taken to ensure safety in the pools," Young said.

"We have been a bit concerned that we would be caught off base in the early days because of the hectic schedule of opening week programs. There has been thorough planning to make sure we are not caught off base."

Disturbed Children's Ward Badly Needed, MD Says

Child psychiatrist Dr. Philip Ney said today he is both optimistic and desperately anxious that a ward for emotionally disturbed children open soon at the Eric Martin Institute.

The need is almost unlimited and very urgent, he said.

For example, I have recently had to admit two pre-teenage boys who were trying very hard to end their lives.

"They had to be admitted for their own safety but we can't give them proper treatment on a ward of adults, some of whom are geriatric and others very disturbed."

Other children that I have recently had to admit include a six-year-old whose hyperactivity day and night was literally driving his mother crazy, a 10-year-old who tried to hang his younger brother and a terribly depressed young boy who was convinced that he was the cause of his father's death."

Opening of a 20-bed children's unit on the empty sixth floor of the psychiatric hospital has been delayed almost two years by a dispute between the provincial government and Royal Jubilee Hospital over the way it will be staffed and organized.

Doctors and hospital have insisted a clinical director is needed. Health Minister Ralph Lofmark has said the government can afford a director or doctors treating their own patients on a fee-for-service basis but not both.

There is only one other children's psychiatric ward in the province, at Vancouver General Hospital.

Ney said today that in psychiatry as in other areas of medicine, children who don't receive proper care may be crippled or die.

"The only difference in children with psychiatric problems is that they die inside. You don't have to pay for a gravestone but you do have to pay chronic institutional care."

Amchitka Otter Deaths Cited As Threat to B.C. Colony

An Alaskan state game department decision not to transplant sea otters from Amchitka to British Columbia and Oregon last summer may jeopardize the survival of the small herd off the coast of Vancouver Island.

Ian Smith, provincial biologist, said 42 otters transplanted from Alaska in 1969-70, are believed to exist off the coast. "But they are scattered all the way up the island," he said. "With such a small colony it may be touch and go whether such a small number of otters can survive. We need more to insure that they will multiply."

Dr. Mike Bigg of the Nanaimo federal biological station, said he hopes Alaskan authorities provide B.C. with 60 additional otters from King William Sound, an area which was not affected by the Amchitka blast.

Frank Jones, acting director of the Alaska State Game division, said transplants to B.C. and Oregon would not take place this summer primarily because of the effects of the underground blast on the Aleutian Island Nov. 6.

State fish and game biologists have estimated that 1,000 otters may have been killed in the immediate vicinity of the blast.

Jones said the transplant program probably would resume when the otter herd recovered.

The group will ask provincial and federal governments for funds to purchase materials necessary to cope with oil.

Halladay said the group is assembling a collection of literature on the best methods of treating affected wildlife.

The group includes private citizens and representatives of organizations such as the SPCA, Victoria Natural History Society and the Vancouver Island Game Bird Society.

Spill Squad to Save Wildlife

A plan is being prepared by a group of citizens to deal with the treatment of wildlife in the event of an oil spill.

Ray Halladay of the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch, chairman of the citizens' group, said there is "no question" that sooner or later there will be a giant spill near B.C.

He says that when this occurs it will be necessary to have a plan ready to deal with the problem of collecting and treating birds and mammals caught in the oil.

What Would Life Be Without Worry?

A BRITISH DOCTOR HAS written a little book endearingly titled "You and Your Guts," but please don't ask me where a copy can be had. If I knew, I'd be nose deep in it right now, hunting for clues that might explain a slight ache in the vicinity of my belt buckle.

Since it didn't show up until I settled behind this typewriter, it is probably a psychosomatic protest by the inner man against work that can't be avoided. Or it could be induced by the tannish sandwiches I bolted while reading a review of the doctor's book.

In any case, it should respond to a qualified prescription handed out by the gut-prober in his tour of the human digestive system. This is not to worry: a piece of advice which he admits is much easier to give than to take.

Some worries — the grim-mer ones — don't yield to cheerful persuasion. There's not much point, for instance, in suggesting to the family man out of work that this too shall pass.

But the minor worries that each day brings are something else again, and it's possible that these are necessary baggage on the mortal journey.

Speaking for myself, I'd be lost without my own ever-changing little crew. That has never quite happened, although there was a year when I was forced to strain pretty hard for a worry large enough to give me a proper work-out.

Our children were doing well in school. Every story I wrote was accomplishing the all but incredible by finding a buyer on its first trip to market. None of us entertained even so minor an ache as the one that now seems to be shifting around toward my left kidney. The weather was perfect, our garden thrived, and the fishing was better than good. There is something unnatural about a state of perfection. Given scope enough, it can even become a bore. Allow still more time, and to begin to generate its own vague worries. Back of these is the well-tested knowledge that tomorrow, if not today, the bubble must burst.

Ours burst. The weather turned sour. I strolled barefoot across a lawn drenched with weed killer and contracted an interesting case of hot feet. Two stories for which my hopes ran high were rejected in the same mail. Our car demanded a valve grind, and raccoons raided our peach tree.

Naturally, I griped, both loud and long. But the change in our fortunes was accompanied by a feeling mighty like relief. It came, I suspect, from having something tangible to worry about once more.

The thing can be overdone, of course, as even casual association with a deep-dyed, chronic worrier will demonstrate. I've known enough of these to realize that any attempt at cherishing them up is likely to be taken as an affront.

I doubt that even the You and Your Guts medico could do much for a confirmed hypochondriac with a well-stuffed medicine closet and a symptom for every day in the year.

It was once my bad luck to be a captive audience for a desk-mate of that persuasion. He was forever snuffing this or swallowing that; his favorite reading was a medical encyclopedia, and a howler a conversation with him might start, if presently developed clinical overtones.

Yet his appetite was only matched by his stamina, and in the year we shared an office, he was never afflicted by any recognizable ailment, not even a common cold. He was the happiest worrier I've ever met, and at last report, he was still enjoying his miseries.

It takes something in the nature of a catastrophe to set me worrying on that scale. But like most of us who on earth do dwell, I'm never short of a few of the minor worries without which life might lose its flavor.

That ache I mentioned seems to have taken itself off in the course of the discussion. But it comes to mind that one of my car's front tires looked the least bit flat this morning.

And if it isn't, I can always keep imagination exercised by wondering what's for dinner. Not to worry, but I hope it won't be liver!

Quebec Outlines Spending

QUEBEC (CP)—Finance Minister Raymond Garneau tabled a $132.8 million supplementary budget in the national assembly Tuesday and said there would be no new tax hikes or borrowing despite a $36.5 million increase in the deficit.

The budget, aimed at tackling unemployment and bolstering welfare programs, earmarks $89.5 million for the social affairs department and $21 million to the department of roads and public works. The remainder will go to other departments.

With predicted expenditures of $4,237.7 million and revenues of $3,939.2 million, the government expects a budgetary deficit of $307.5 million for the current fiscal year—$36.5 million more than Mr. Garneau predicted in his budget in March.

No tax increases or borrowing were necessary, Mr. Garneau said, because the government had recently borrowed $75 million to finance current spending and because of an increase in tax revenue.

Increased productivity, retail sales and sales tax revenues also had helped the government's financial picture, he said.

OTTAWA HELPS

The federal government is paying 53 per cent of the $80 million the social affairs department is going to pump directly into welfare programs, which Mr. Garneau says will help stimulate the provincial economy.

Most of the non-welfare money is being directed into pump-priming projects.

French Woman Free After Disappearance

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter)—French woman journalist Michele Ray was freed early today some 40 hours after she was taken from the home of a friend by three men and a woman claiming to be left-wing guerrillas, police said.

Police confirmed that Miss Ray, who appeared to be in good health, was left at the home of her friend.

She strongly denied reports that it had been a "kidnaping," police added.

The gang who took her away said they "wanted to talk with her," said Uruguayan lawyer Esther Gilio, owner of the house where Miss Ray is staying.

CBC Show Sparks Pun-Filled House Exchange

OTTAWA (CP)—A CBC television program about a homosexual "marriage" sparked a pun-filled exchange in the Commons Tuesday.

Don Jamieson, the transport minister, emerged from it with an accolade from Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton-The Sydney) that "in every way possible, he is a real man."

Prime Minister Trudeau suggested the whole program might be regarded simply as "a fairy tale."

But Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland-Colchester North) said that, although the topic was producing much laughter, the idea of a marriage between two male homosexuals is "vulgar and distasteful" to the bulk of Canadians and the taxpayer should not have to stand for it.

Mr. Muir started the exchange by saying that the CBC program televised Tuesday night would be run in a half-hour of prime time. Actually, the program ran for a full hour.

"Do you need more time," Mr. Jamieson interjected, starting the first gust of guffaws.

"That's pretty good, Don," Mr. Muir replied. "You must know something about it."

When the noise subsided, Mr. Muir said he wanted to know whether the program was "intended as entertainment or propaganda."

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the question out of order.

But Mr. Coates returned to it, saying there should be an answer since the taxpayers support the CBC.

Mr. Trudeau got off the "punny" crack, saying it had been suggested by a Liberal MP behind him. The suggested that perhaps Mr.

Muir should withdraw his "kind of slur" about Mr. Jamieson.

Mr. Lamoureux said the whole exchange just reinforced his opinion that the matter should have been dropped.

But Mr. Coates said there had been no satisfactory answer. Why was such a program being aired in "family viewing time?"

That went unanswered but

Mr. Muir bobbed up on a point of privilege.

He had the highest regard for the transport minister, he said, then added his opinion of Mr. Jamieson being "a real man." More guffaws.

'Dirty Pool' Charge in Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan New Democratic Party, which rode to power in a landslide victory in June, hopes to deliver the coup de grace to the Liberals in two byelections today.

At stake are Morse constituency, held by former Liberal premier Ross Thatcher until his death July 23, and Souris-Estevan, left vacant Oct. 17 by the death of the NDP's Russ Brown.

Victories would be mere frosting on the cake for the New Democrats, who have 44 of 60 seats in the legislature.

It's not that simple for the Liberals, who ruled the province from 1963 until June and who now have only 14 seats. Observers say they must win to remain a strong political force.

The Liberals have been screaming "dirty pool" since Premier Allan Blakeney called the byelections Nov. 2.

Acting Liberal Leader D. G. Stewart says his party suffered overwhelming defeat at the polls, then the loss of their leader and haven't had a chance to reorganize.

The Liberals meet to choose a new leader in Saskatoon next week and Mr. Stewart wanted the byelections postponed. The New Democrats refused.

FARMERS RUNNING

In Morse, located in south-central Saskatchewan, three candidates are bidding to replace Mr. Thatcher. All are farmers.

The Progressive Conservatives, a party unable to muster much enthusiasm in Saskatchewan, have sent in Leader Ed Nasserden, 52, of Saskatoon. Jack Wiebe, 35, of Herbert is representing the Liberals and Jim Murdock, 39, of Central Butte, the NDP.

In the southeastern constituency of Souris-Estevan, also primarily rural, there's a two-way race between the NDP's Kim Thorson, 39, and the Liberals' Ian MacDougall, 43.

Mr. Thorson is an Estevan lawyer and Mr. MacDougall is a pipeline executive, also from Estevan.

Mr. MacDougall held the seat until he was defeated in June by Mr. Brown, a former cabinet minister who was making a political comeback.

In the June 23rd election, Mr. Thatcher was elected with 3,478 votes to 2,765 for Norman Beach, the NDP candidate.

In Souris-Estevan, Mr. Brown received 5,032 votes compared with 4,734 for Mr. MacDougall.

Mr. Stewart criticized the New Democrats for calling the byelection when Mr. Brown had been buried only 10 days before.

The polls open today at 9 a.m. CST (10 p.m. EST) and close at 7 p.m. CST.

Agriculture Minister Jack

Messer said during the campaign that the NDP could stand on its record of the last five months.

"We were given a mandate to carry out a comprehensive agricultural program and we have advanced farther in five months than the Liberals managed in seven years," he told a public rally.

He accused the Liberal candidates of avoiding the main issues but he asked by Mr. Stewart how the NDP would increase employment when it was chasing investors out of the province.

Mr. Stewart was referring to cancellation of a proposed iron mine in northeastern Saskatchewan and a proposed pulp mill in the northwest.

Less than a month after the general election, Mr. Blakeney said the iron mine wouldn't go ahead because it was a "bad deal" financially for the province. A similar explanation was given when a contract for the $177-million pulp mill was cancelled.

Mr. Stewart also criticized the NDP for bringing federal farm policies into the fray.

After five months in office, Mr. Blakeney should "have the guts to fight the byelections on his own policies, not those of the federal government," he said.

There are more than 11,700 registered voters in Souris-Estevan and more than 7,300 in Morse.

ILLNESS STRIKES 40 AFTER EATING

EDMONTON (CP) — About 40 students at a University of Alberta residence became ill Tuesday and food poisoning was suspected as the cause.

Dr. M. J. Ball, director of student health services, said food poisoning had not been confirmed and cases of a similar illness, caused by a virus, had been reported in the city.

All the students affected had eaten either lunch, dinner or both at the residence, but preliminary examination of dietary records did not turn up a common denominator.

FROM LONG HAIR FAD BARBER SCHOOL DIES

WINNIPEG (CP) — After 50 years in business, the Moler Barber School plans to close at the end of the year.

The manager of the school said enrolment has been falling "since long hair came into the picture."

Seven years ago, the school had three locations in Winnipeg, turning out 60 barbers every eight months.

Now it has only three students and a small shop on Portage Avenue. One of its two instructors left Monday.

The manager, A. E. Bonney, said, "There's no money in barbering," a trade he entered as a youth.

Now he plans to retire.

The president of the Manitoba Master Barber Association, John McLelland, said the Moler school is the city's only private barber school.

People may learn barbering at a community college and a publicly-run school in Winnipeg or at a community college in Brandon.

McLelland said, "Times are tough everywhere, not just in barbering. But most of the barbers are moving with the times and there are new shops opening too."

"Most of the men going out of business are close to retirement age anyway."

Alberta Resists Bilingual 'Force'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government doesn't want bilingual districts forced on it by federal law, Don Getty, minister of federal and inter-governmental affairs, said this week.

"We don't like the idea of legislation," Getty said following a three-hour, closed-door meeting with Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier. "We would like to see such districts established by local custom."

A 10-member advisory board appointed under the official Languages Act recently recommended that three Alberta districts — Falher-Groulxville-Peace River, Leduc-Morinville-St. Albert and St. Paul-Bonnyville-Lac La Biche — be proclaimed bilingual areas.

Pelletier told a news conference that no decision has been made by the federal government on whether to proclaim the three districts.

In any case, he said, the only obligation to provide bilingual services would be on the federal government.

"We don't want to charge ahead," Pelletier said.

Session Date Set

EDMONTON (CP) — The first session of the 17th Alberta legislature will open March 2 with a date for fall session to be announced later, Premier Peter Lougheed announced Tuesday.

Lougheed, whose Progressive Conservatives ousted the Social Credit government Aug. 30 after they had been in power for 36 years, said his cabinet had approved the opening date.

Presidency Bid

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgarian says he will bid for the presidency of the national Progressive Conservative Association at the party's annual convention in Ottawa Sunday through Tuesday.

Roy Deyell, the party's national treasurer, said Tuesday

he would seek the position because Western Canada has strongly supported the PCs in the past 15 years.

Snow On Way?

Brisk easterly winds are expected to whip the shores of Vancouver Island this evening, bringing a mixture of overcast skies and showers.

While there's no risk of snowshoes becoming the rig of the day in the near future, forecasts call for a possible mixture of snow with tonight's rain, particularly in areas like the Malahat.

But it won't last.

Forecast for Thursday is for more of the same — clouds and rain with low temperatures tonight ranging in the 35 degree mark, rising to the mid-40s Thursday.

Hussein Militant

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan called on Arab states today to mobilize their armies for a showdown with Israel "because force is the only means that can resolve the Middle East conflict."

In a speech from the throne opening the Jordanian parliament, the 36-year-old monarch said that Israel "believes only in force, so force must be our way to peace."

The militant tone of the king's policy speech indicated he is moving closer to the thinking of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat who said his country has decided to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict by armed combat rather than peace negotiations.

Heavy security precautions were evident inside and outside the parliament building.

The king's speech came three days after the assassination of Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Teli in Cairo.

Hussein insisted on Israel's withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands and again promised Palestinian Arabs in the Israeli-occupied West Bank they would have the right to decide their future only after these territories are liberated.

In Washington, Israeli Premier Golda Meir hinted on arrival Tuesday for talks with President Nixon that she might be ready to suggest some new path towards a Middle East peace.

Another possibility, she suggested, was renewal of the United Nations mediation effort by special envoy Gunnar Jarring — overshadowed by the U.S. drive on the canal question for the last nine months.

REFUNDS STUDIED

British Columbia's Liquor industry is considering a depot system for refunding wine and liquor bottles, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said today.

Kiernan's statement came after he was asked whether B.C. would follow Alberta and require damage deposits on the containers as an anti-liquor measure.

The minister said it is "preferable" that industry police itself and B.C.'s liquor act requires other amendments before enlarging its scope to include wine and liquor containers.

He said he has not decided whether to bring these containers under the act should industry fail to create the depot system. Kiernan emphasized the liquor industry has not given him a "declared statement of policy" that the depots will be created.

CIVIL WAR in East Pakistan and continuing fighting between India and Pakistan has left millions homeless and starving. Babies and children are the most pitiful victims of this tragic strife and this year the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada is devoting the full resources of its Cup of Milk

Fund to Pakistani refugee relief. The fund campaign opened officially in Victoria Tuesday night when USC executive director Dr. Lotfa Hirschman made a moving appeal for help at a public meeting. An account of the meeting and details on how Victorians can help is on Page 2.

Pakistan Army Admits India Force Winning

From AP-Reuters

The Pakistan army says its soldiers repulsed Indian attacks at two points on the East Pakistan border, inflicting heavy casualties on the Indians.

However, Pakistan radio Tuesday night admitted that Indian troops were making small gains in various areas of East Pakistan but "at great costs."

The radio said India was using tanks and bringing in troops on all fronts.

A Pakistan army spokesman in Dacca said Tuesday night the Pakistani troops repulsed an Indian attack at Chaugacha, in the Jessore district on East Pakistan's western frontier, and thwarted an Indian attempt to capture Kamalpur, in the Mymensingh sector on the northwest front.

He said the Indians, having failed to capture Kamalpur, launched a fresh attack supported by tanks and artillery Monday night on two fronts.

The spokesman said the battlefield was covered with Indian dead and that the Indians tried to remove the bodies from East Pakistani territory under a covering artillery bombardment.

He also reported that Pakistani troops captured seven Indian soldiers and a quantity of arms and ammunition in Dinajpur, in East Pakistan's northern sector.

The Indian government says the fighting in East Pakistan is mainly between the Mukti Bahini, the East Pakistani independence fighters, and the West Pakistani army. New Delhi says Indian troops have crossed into East Pakistan only when attacked by the Pakistanis.

U.S. Hints Devaluation Of Own Dollar on Way

ROME (UPI) — The United States today considered devaluation of the once mighty and now seriously beleaguered American dollar as part of a new western monetary system.

Karl Schiller, the West German economic and finance minister, agreed with a questioner that U.S. readiness to discuss concrete figures, including the dollar, represented a breakthrough in monetary negotiations.

The U.S. conceded the possibility of dollar devaluation in negotiations with other members of the so-called Group of Ten, the world's wealthiest non-Communist countries, in return for significant financial and trade advantages.

West European officials said they were "reasonably optimistic" that a basis for monetary realignment was possible with final negotiations early next year.

NEW SYSTEM

"There is every sign that America is now prepared to see a framework for a new system which would include a change in the dollar's value, provided the conditions are right," a European Common Market participant said.

The framework, as discussed by finance ministers, involved devaluation of the U.S. dollar and upward revaluation of western European currencies, such as the franc and the mark, plus the Japanese yen.

"Does this represent a breakthrough?" a reporter shouted as Schiller appeared. "Yes, it could," Schiller replied.

A French spokesman sounded another optimistic note.

"We can say there has been certain progress," he said.

The "ten," The United States, Canada, Britain, Japan, West Germany, France, Italy, Belgium, Sweden and The Netherlands met with only finance and treasury ministers and central bankers conferring.

Conference sources said this indicated the talks were at a high and delicate, political level, a fact supported by the decision of French Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing to leave the conference room to telephone Paris four times.

U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, the Europeans said, was confronted with a solid front by the major U.S. trade partners that a realignment was impossible unless it involved a downward change in the dollar's value.

Conference sources said the six European Common Market members plus Britain would like to see a dollar devaluation somewhere around the seven per cent mark.

A TUG IN ANGER

By NEILL GADDES

Times Staff

Joseph D. Latondress felt he had an unwarranted telephone bill to pay for a phone he never used.

Early today he backed a tow-truck up to the front doors of the B.C. Telephone building, 1321 Blanshard, connected the tow cable and drove off tearing the doors off.

"I do have a good excuse, I feel," the 20-year-old, accused from Quesnel told Judge William Ostler.

Latondress said two years ago he had requested the phone company to remove a phone from a home he was leaving in Port Alberni.

He said he left that address but several months later received a bill for $300. He said he and people who moved into the house continued to use the phone under his name.

Ostler said the incident was the "most blatant, aggressive, case of mischief" he had heard of awhile.

The judge gave the man a nominal one day in jail and fined him $400.

NEWS BRIEFS

Ex-Grit Promoted

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Liberal Larry Desjardins, the St. Boniface MLA who has had an in-and-out relationship with Manitoba's New Democratic Party government since it came to office in 1969, was appointed to the provincial cabinet today by Premier Ed Schreyer.

Freight Rolling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian National Railway freight service began returning to normal on the main line today when a full shift of yardmen returned to their jobs. The return-to-work followed a Tuesday meeting at which more than 200 members of the United Transportation Union, Local 1747, were given legal advice to stop their protest against new contract provisions.

CANDIDATES' VIEWS

Over the next few days the Times will carry the views of local candidates in the Dec. 11 municipal elections. Today on pages 19, 20 and 21 the statements of some of the candidates appear. More will be presented in subsequent editions.

Cabinet Sets Closure On Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — To Liberal cheers, the government today gave formal notice that it will impose closure to cut off debate on the tax change bill.

Privy Council President Allan MacEachern, government house leader, gave the notice that closure will be invoked under rule 75C, the so-called guillotine rule.

Use of the closure, for the first time since 1969, will end debate on the tax bill next Wednesday, Dec. 8.

The tax bill has been under Commons debate for 28 days. Closure was last used in 1969 to pass the new Commons rules that included 75C.

PC PROPOSAL REJECTED

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, said the government's use of 75C would set the Commons on an uncharted course studded with "shoals and reefs."

The government should not have "stupidly rejected" the suggestion by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield that the mammoth bill be divided, with early passage assured for those sections with which practically all MPs agreed and the rest of it held in abeyance for later debate.

The House must be wary because use of the 75C rule would set precedents which, in future, would bind the Commons and the country.

On Tuesday, much of the argument centred on a contemporary tax case—the Crown versus the late Stanford Smythe and Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens — and how the decision is made regarding court procedure for tax-evasion cases.

The issue was the Crown option of prosecuting either by indictment or by summary conviction.

When the Crown selects indictment, conviction carries a mandatory prison sentence of between two months and five years. Summary conviction leaves the option of either a fine or a jail term to the judge.

Smythe and Ballard, holding the controlling interests in Maple Leaf Gardens, home of Toronto's National Hockey League team, challenged the government right to proceed by indictment after they were charged with tax evasion. The matter went to the Supreme Court of Canada, which upheld the government's right.

STILL BEFORE COURTS

The tax-evasion part of the case still is before the courts.

But Conservative MPs argued Tuesday that the Crown option is unfair.

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said the system destroyed what should be an objective of the law—equal treatment for all.

Corporations, convicted of tax evasion pay fines, said Mr. Bigg, a former RCMP officer.

SHARP SET TO HIT AUTO PACT BRAKES

TORONTO (CP) — The Star quotes External Affairs Minister Sharp as indicating Canada is prepared to suspend temporarily the safeguards in the Canada-United States auto pact.

"It is believed the suspension might last two years," The Star says.

It quotes Sharp as saying in an interview that Canada is prepared to make "contributions" to help the U.S. ease its economic problems so that Washington can abolish its 10-per-cent extra duty on imports.

Sharp "indicated the Canadian contributions would include" suspension of the safeguards, "agreement to increase the duty-free allowance on goods bought by Canadian visitors to the U.S. — now $25 every three months — and agreement to purchase more arms from the U.S. under the defence sharing agreement."

Ferry Report Dismays Victims

Times Staff

An elderly Alberta couple who plunged in their car into the ocean from an unloading B.C. Ferry in Nanaimo expressed dismay Tuesday that a B.C. Ferries report attached no blame to the crew, or to mechanical failure.

Mrs. William Martin, 75, of Fort Macleod, said she and her husband, who is 82, were driving off the Queen of New Westminster ferry ramp Oct. 20 when the ferry suddenly moved out. "Now whose fault is that, I ask you?"

She added that neither she nor her husband were ever contacted by B.C. Ferries in its investigation of the incident.

FULL REPORT

In a letter to Highways Minister Wesley Black, B.C. Ferries general manager Monty Aldous said no mechanical failure of the ferry's hydraulic system had been found nor anything to indicate human error.

Aldous could not be reached to find out who carried out the investigation or if the full report was going to be made public. However, a highways department spokesman said today that mechanical experts had been called in and witnesses questioned.

"They couldn't find out what was the cause," Herbert Hacking, 53, a highways department patrolman, who with John König, 19, of Vancouver, saved the couple from drowning told the Times he saw the ship pull away and the car slip into the water.

"When a ferry moves nothing will hold it," he said when asked whether the vessel was secured.

Hacking, who was later questioned by B.C. Ferries on the incident, said the car floated for a few seconds before sinking nose downward. He and König then dived in.

B.C. Trade Deputy Reported in Ottawa

Robert Renwick is no longer deputy minister of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce for British Columbia, the Times learned today.

Renwick, 54, left B.C. two weeks ago for Ottawa for an undisclosed job in the federal civil service, a source close to the former deputy minister said.

The source said Renwick was "just let out of his job" at the end of October. Renwick's house at 3542 Redwood is for sale and his phone is out of service.

Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skilling was not available for comment today. His secretary said Skilling would not be making an announcement about Renwick's departure or his replacement for some time yet.

There have been rumors that Renwick's replacement will come from outside the department — possibly a former pulp mill executive. Renwick became deputy minister in 1967 when Health Minister Ralph Lofmark held Skilling's portfolio. Skilling succeeded Lofmark in the portfolio three years ago.

Affluence, Drugs Go Hand-in-Hand: Report

TORONTO (CP) — A survey on drug use among high school students in North Bay, Ont., reveals that children from better-off homes are more prone to taking certain drugs.

The survey, conducted by Dianne Fejer of the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation, also found that students who don't use alcohol or marijuana tend to have better scholastic records than those who do.

The survey, conducted last May, was released today.

All 3,347 students in Grades 9, 11 and 13 in North Bay's six high schools were asked to take part. About 82 per cent, or 2,576 students, answered.

The survey took into account the use of 12 drugs ranging from alcohol, tobacco and marijuana to barbiturates, glue and other solvents.

Alcohol and tobacco were most commonly used with 70.3 per cent of the students having taken alcohol within the previous six months and 47.7 per cent having taken tobacco.

Marijuana was used by 21.2 per cent of the students; LSD by 10.5 per cent; barbiturates by 8.2 per cent; other hallucinogens by 6.5 per cent; tranquilizers by 7.0 per cent; amphetamines by 4.3 per cent; opiates and solvents by 3.5 per cent; and glue by 1.8 per cent.

The survey also found that males tend to use more alcohol, marijuana, tobacco, LSD and other hallucinogens than females. Females use more tranquilizers.

Students who had used alcohol and marijuana in the previous six months, the survey found, more often had fathers who were professionals and managers than students who had not used drugs.

For example, the survey stated, about 27 per cent of alcohol users had professionals or managers for fathers, compared with 22.5 per cent of non-users.

Alcohol and marijuana use were closely related, the survey found, stating that almost all marijuana users had taken alcohol in the previous six months.

The survey added it appears that marijuana isn't a substitute for alcohol and that marijuana users are also more often drinkers.

Carving Sparks Uproar

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — A wood carving done by a famous singer has become a matter of international controversy.

Before starting on a great career as a singer, the New Zealand bass Inia te Wiata had, like many members of the Maori race, gained a knowledge of wood carving.

Carving was one of the most highly developed Maori art forms and many Maori houses and village buildings were richly decorated.

Some Maori carvings rather resembled Canadian totem poles and the resemblance in significance and execution has often been discussed. But Maori carvings were a good deal more intricate and elaborately designed.

Inia te Wiata gained fame as a leading singer in operatic performances around the world and in leading roles in musicals in big cities on both sides of the Atlantic.

For some years he made his headquarters in London. There, over a period of some six years, he worked in his spare time on a 55-foot-tall pouli or Maori pole of recognition. It was a labor of love and a tribute to his native country and race.

SEVERAL STOREYS HIGH
The pole was intended to become a centerpiece of the decor for the skyscraper New Zealand House in London. It was to rise spectacularly through several storeys.

Between engagements abroad, Inia te Wiata worked on the pole in a basement in New Zealand House. Distinguished visitors called it a major work of Polynesian art.

But the singer died in London this year before work was finished. In particular, one of two soaring wings, or ship-prow shapes, was incomplete.

After consultations, the New Zealand ministry of foreign affairs decided to send the unfinished part to New Zealand to be completed by a Maori master carver.

That caused an outcry. Some traditionalists insisted that such a work must by Maori custom be left unfinished, and that it would be contrary to racial lore for someone else to do the work.

The carver designated to complete the work did not improve matters by declaring that while he admires Inia te Wiata as a singer, his carving was not according to Maori tradition and in fact amounted to "doodlings."

The claim was sharply challenged by another master carver who taught Inia te Wiata. He declared that the design of the pole had been discussed with the singer and approved by his tribe.

MAORIS DIVIDED
However, the unfinished wing was flown to New Zealand, against the wishes of the singer's widow, who wants the carving to remain in the state her husband left it.

The matter has become a subject of heated argument between Britain and New Zealand. Letters from London declare that prominent British sculptors and artists are "outraged" at the idea of someone else completing the work. They declare that it should remain unfinished like those of great sculptors of earlier days.

In the New Zealand Parliament, a Labor opposition MP, Dr. A. M. Finlay, denounced further work on the carving as "an act of vandalism" or "at least an act of insensitivity."

Since New Zealand House in London is the responsibility of the ministry of foreign affairs, the decision is being left to the ministry by a government not anxious to enter the fray. The ministry is consulting the singer's family, conflicting Maori groups, and others interested.

Meanwhile the unfinished portion of the carving is in storage in New Zealand.

Woman Defrauded

RED DEER (CP) — James Newnham, 33, of Red Deer was sentenced Monday to two years in Prince Albert penitentiary for fraudulently obtaining $57,000 from a Red Deer woman.

Between Aug. 11, 1969, and Dec. 5, 1969, Newnham was manager of United Investments Ltd. of Red Deer and convinced Mrs. Julia Johanson to invest her money in debentures. Court was told he transferred the money into various bank accounts opened in his own name.
